D. C. Parents Face Baby-Murder Charge

Bandits Seek $50,000, Get $160 From Ex-Gambler

Blight Lee's Home Invaded; 2 Robbers Threaten His Wife, Cite Warring Link

Two men who may be implicated in the recent holdups of District gamblers invaded the Arlington home of a former numbers writer yesterday expecting to find $50,000, but got only $160.

Described as a pair of "Mutt and Jeff" bandits, one of them hidden behind a weird Halloween mask, they gained entrance at 12:15 p. m. to the fashionable home of Blight H. Lee, at 2700 S. June st.

Lee's wife, Marguerite, 31, was at home alone with two small children. At gunpoint, they forced her to open drawers in the bedroom she occupies with her husband. Their search of the room turned up only $160. They took with them a small metal filing cabinet said to contain Lee's personal papers.

Reporter Hears Call

Lee told Washington Post reporter William H. Smith that he had been a numbers operator but quit the business in 1941. He said he now owns a farm and a part interest in a Washington garage.

Smith was at Lee's home when the telephone rang at 6:30 p. m., about six hours after the holdup, and heard, at Lee's invitation, a conversation between Lee and a man who identified himself as one of the stickup men.

Smith heard the caller tell Lee they had expected to find $50,000 or $60,000 in the house.

"We thought this was one of those big jobs—like the Warring boys," the caller said. "I could blow my brains out for pulling a job like this."

[Three gunmen invaded the home of Emmitt Warring, gambling bigtimer, at 3900 Macomb st. nw., in January, forced him to open a wall safe and got away with more than $20,000.—Editor's Note]

After Lee began his conversation with the caller, he had motioned to the reporter to pick up an extension and listen.

Smith heard the man, a tough-talking character, identify himself as an out-of-town man who had been called in on this job by "an organization."

"Somebody apparently got some wrong information," the caller said, "or else you know the wrong people."

He suggested a "deal" to Lee, offering to return the filing cabinet containing Lee's papers if Lee would call off the police.

Smith heard the caller suggest that Lee tell the police he had recovered his property and wanted no further action taken.

He several times stressed the fact that "nobody got hurt" in the robbery and implied that somebody might get hurt if Lee didn't follow his suggestions.

He said he would call Lee back on Wednesday or Thursday to arrange a deal for return of the filing cabinet but meanwhile expected Lee to call off the police.

Arlington Detective Chief C. Burns Pressley, when informed of the mysterious call, said it was

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT KELLEY WAIT AT MORGUE AS CORONER'S JURY DELIBERATES

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

The parents of a 4-month-old child last night were charged with murder and held in the District Jail for grand jury action in the skull-fracture death of the baby, Eileen, Saturday night.

They are Robert Patrick Kelley, 29, and Elizabeth Kelley, 21, of 880 Hemlock st. nw., parents of Eileen Kelley and Elizabeth, 21 months.

Donald H. Dalton, attorney for the couple, said they would go before District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff at 9:30 a.m. today to request that bond be set at $1500 apiece.

Prior to the police charge of murder, a coroner's jury debated for more than an hour before bringing in a verdict.

The child, the verdict said, died as a result of a fractured skull received at the hands of either her father or her mother or both.

Kelley, 29, is a third-year student of aeronautical engineering at Catholic University. He met his wife, an Austrian, while serving overseas in 1945 with the Army, and they were married three years ago.

The infant died Saturday night. The parents first told Homicide Squad Detective Sergeant A. D. Clarke she strangled while drinking orange juice.

An autopsy performed by Dr. Christopher J. Murphy on Sunday showed that death was caused by a severe fracture of the skull on the left side.

Mrs. Kelley, who celebrated her twenty-first birthday Thursday, said at the inquest that while she was feeding the baby Saturday afternoon, the child slipped from her arms and fell to the floor, striking her head.

Dr. Murphy, however, testified that damage to the baby's skull as shown in the autopsy could not have been caused by a single fall

Attlee Wins Test Vote On Housing

Government Survives 2d No-Confidence Motion, 314 to 289; Another Due Today

London, March 13 (U.P.).—The Labor government won its second vote of confidence in five days in Commons tonight by a majority of 25.

The vote was 314 to 289 against a Conservative motion of no confidence on the government's housing program.

Prime Minister Clement Atlee had announced the government would resign if defeated and precipitate one of the biggest political crises in years.

Two more no-confidence votes are to come in the Conservative campaign of constant harassing of the government—one on finance Tuesday night and one on national defense Thursday.

Loss Means Election

As the government has chosen to make such no-confidence votes a matter of life and death, there would be an immediate election if it lost one of them.

The government emerged from the February 23 election with a majority of six over the combined Conservative-Liberal opposition in the 625-seat Commons.

The government got a majority of 14 Thursday in the first no-confidence vote, on Labor's determination to put the great iron and steel industry under state ownership.

That time the nine-member Liberal Party voted against the government.

Tonight, the Liberals had indicated they would abstain. But it was believed that at least six of them voted for the government.

Bevan's Housing Attacked

Health Minister Aneurin Bevan, leader of the left wing in the cabinet, was the target of the Conservative attack on the housing program. He will be the target also in Tuesday's finance attack, as the National Health Service is costing £98,730,000 ($276,444,000) more this year than was estimated.

Closing debate, Bevan said Conservative charges that the housing program had failed were "falsehoods." Britain and its fellow Socialist country, Sweden, held the world's housing record, he said.

Bevan invited Churchill—who has become famous as an artist—to aid the housing program by painting some houses.

Conservative Walter Elliott opened the housing debate. He said the 175,000 houses the government plans to build this year represent only half the prewar rate. Further, he said, while 228,000 permanent houses were built in 1948, only 198,000 were built in 1949. He said also that the government built too many houses to rent and too few to sell. He demanded more freedom for private builders.

Charges Are Denied; Senator Reneges on Windup, But Rejects Long-Session Idea

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday added four more names of Federal officials to his roster of "pro-Communists."

At the same time, however, he reneged on his promise of last week to finish by yesterday his presentation to a special Senate subcommittee of charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department.

The four persons McCarthy tagged with Red leanings, or worse, were:

1. Owen J. Lattimore, from time to time a State Department adviser and a nationally known authority on the Far East.
2. Haldore Hanson, a State Department official connected with "Point Four" work.
3. Mrs. Esther Caukin Brunauer, a State Department official on its UNESCO staff.
4. Her husband, Stephen Brunauer, former Navy commander and now a civilian scientist in the Navy Department's explosive research division.

Lattimore on U. N. Mission

Lattimore is now on a United Nations mission in Afghanistan. His wife, and his boss, Dr. Detlev W. Bronk, president of The Johns Hopkins University — quickly entered denials for him.

In their own behalf, the other three persons named by McCarthy firmly denied the charges. Mrs. Brunauer said she was asking Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the special Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, to be heard before that body.

Yesterday's hearings, which again took place in the packed, klieg-lighted, Senate Caucus Room, were in marked contrast to the fire-and-brimstone sessions last Wednesday and Thursday.

McCarthy read his testimony through with almost no interruptions—only occasional reading by Tydings of some of the other sponsors of organizations with which McCarthy said the four persons he named had been associated.

Objects to Afternoon Session

The only exchange of any consequence was between McCarthy and Tydings over the subcommittee agenda. On McCarthy's promise that he would finish his cases yesterday, Tyings proposed to have his subcommittee sit throughout the afternoon.

McCarthy objected on the ground that housing legislation was coming up in the Senate and that he was obliged to be present.

Later, it was determined the housing legislation was not to be called up. McCarthy still objected to continuing, however, this time for the reason that he had to attend to his constituents' affairs.

Finally, after infinitely polite but equally persistent prodding by Tydings, McCarthy said he could

House Defeats 2 A. M. Sunday Drinking Bill

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 242-70 House vote yesterday killed the bill to move Washington's Saturday midnight drinking deadline to 2 a. m. Sunday.

The bill had previously been approved by an overwhelming majority of the House District Committee.

However, it developed during more than an hour of parliamentary shadow-boxing that a committee majority was no longer interested in the measure which had been rushed to the House floor during the FEPC filibuster. The measure was sponsored by Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.).

In a roll call of the House yesterday, 13 members of the committee, including Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), voted against letting the House consider the Klein bill. Klein and three other members of the District Committee voted to consider the measure.

The 13-4 District Committee lineup, expressed in yesterday's roll call, just about reversed the lineup by which the District Committee in a closed-door session voted less than a month ago to recommend that the House pass the Klein bill.

Defeat of the bill occurred before a word of debate. Members said later the politically touchy idea of liquor on Sunday was one reason for the big vote against the bill.

Another issue in the background was the old-time one of prohibition. One member explained the drys are always more active back home than are the wets in an election year.

It was the FEPC feud that helped get the bill to the House. It was one of seven rushed out by

Court Asked To Close 11 Bottle Clubs

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

United States Attorney George Morris Fay yesterday moved to dissolve 11 of Washington after-hours clubs.

Fay filed petitions to dissolve the charters of the bottle clubs, charging they were incorporated "in bad faith" and operate as "shams, devices, subterfuges and makeshifts" to violate liquor laws.

The petitions asked District Court to require the after-hours clubs to show cause why their corporate charters should not be dissolved.

Fay drew his authority from that section of the District Code which orders the United States attorney to seek to revoke the charter—by civil action—of any corporation

Agency Stocks Up 247-Year Supply Of Paper Binders

By the United Press

Government agencies have a squirrel-like tendency to stock up needlessly on supplies, according to the General Services Administration.

One agency has a 93-year supply of light bulbs, GSA reported to the House Appropriations Committee in testimony made public yesterday. It also had a 247-year supply of looseleaf binders, and 168 years of filler paper.

GSA has been trying to find excess supplies and spread them out among agencies that need them.

It has checked only 11 of the 105 executive agencies since 1947 and reported "potential tangible savings of $243,000 in annual salaries, inventory reduction of $693,330, and the release of 133,400 square feet of storage area."

Truman Plans To Reorganize Agencies Filed

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday handed Congress 21 Government reorganization plans designed to write nearly half of the Hoover Commission's recommendations into law.

The big package of plans, chiefly charting direct lines of command and responsibility in the executive branch, will take effect in 60 calendar days unless vetoed by either house.

Opposition appeared limited to about four or five of the projected shifts, but members last night were still thumbing through the tall stack of proposals.

Senate Expenditures Chairman John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) promised prompt Senate committee consideration. Unless there's an unexpected flare-up, he predicted "at least 18 of the plans will become law, and possibly all 21."

Major reshuffling proposals would:

1. Transfer functions of the Maritime Commission to the Commerce Department and create an Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation. Within the department, a three-man Federal Maritime Board would award subsidies and take over all regulatory

Quick Excise Vote Is Blocked; Truman Tax Hike Plea Ignored

By The Associated Press

Democrats threw out President Truman's limitations on excise tax slashes yesterday, but they promised to try to dig up other revenues to balance off the losses.

They first defeated in the House Ways and Means Committee, by a 15-to-10 rigid party line vote, a Republican effort to ram through a "quickie" bill slashing excise taxes immediately by about one billion dollars.

But the 15 Democrats then, by a similar vote, put through their own substitute resolution that:

1. Ignored the President's call for a one-billion-dollar net increase in taxes.

2. Opened the way for excise tax slashes, perhaps far beyond the 655-million-dollar bounds Mr. Truman had suggested. The excise reductions on such things as furs, jewelry, luggage, cosmetics, travel around 1 billion dollars, some Democrats said.

3. But, in the face of the threat of a presidential veto if the cut is not balanced with new revenue, the resolution said the committee will try to replace the loss from excise cutting "by closing loopholes in existing tax laws, by strict enforcement against tax evaders, and, if necessary, such other tax changes as may be deemed feasible."

This probably means there can be no excise reductions before July 1, at the earliest.

The President has proposed a 655-million-dollar cut in excises, with this loss to be offset and another one billion dollars of net revenue added, by plugging tax law "loopholes" and by higher taxes on big corporations, inheritances and big gifts. No change in individual income taxes was suggested.

The Treasury proposed only these excise cuts:

Taking half off the 20 percent levies on furs, luggage, jewelry and toilet preparations; erasing the 3 percent tax on freight; reducing the passenger ticket excise from 15 percent to 10, and cutting the rate on long-distance telephone and telegraph service from 25 to 15 percent. A new 10 percent excise on television sets also was proposed.

But the Democratic motion, approved by the committee, made no mention of a one-million-dollar net increase in taxes, and left the way

This Car and Truck Got Collision Habit

Hoboken, N. J., March 13 (AP).—A half-ton pick-up truck moved out from the curb today and collided with a passenger car.

A radio squad car came to help the drivers, Mario Ceragioli, 40, and Nicholas Canzano, 53, settle the routine of exchanging licenses.

Ten minutes later the same patrolmen answered another collision call. This time, they said, the same car driver had backed into the same truck parked in another section of the mile-square city.

Leopold Vote Widens Party Leaders' Rift

Brussels, March 13 (AP).—The leaders of both government parties, Social Christians and Liberals, split today in a deeper crisis than ever as a result of the plebiscite on King Leopold of Belgium.

Two factions of the dominant Catholic and pro-Leopold Social Christian Party raced to Switzerland with conflicting advice for the exiled King.

Premier Gaston Eyskens, canceling a second cabinet meeting over the issue this afternoon, was reported on his way to Leopold's chateau to recommend his abdication.

Eysken's argument was reported to be in substance: It would be unwise for Belgium to have a 57-percent King.

At the same time, Franz Leemans, aide to stanchly Leopoldist

Mrs. Roosevelt's Video Show With Robeson Put Off

New York, March 13 (U.P.).—The producers of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's television show today called off next Sunday's program, on which Singer Paul Robeson was slated to appear, after receiving a flood of protest calls.

For more than an hour this afternoon the switchboard of the National Broadcasting Co. was tied up with protest calls. Many persons threatened to picket the studio if Robeson appeared.

Mrs. Roosevelt, her son Elliott, and Martin Jones, the three producers of the show, decided to call off the roundtable, which had been slated to discuss "The Position of the Negro in American Political Life."

NBC said Mrs. Roosevelt would substitute another topic and speaker.

Student Red Unit Growing, Probers Told

By The Associated Press

The House Un-Amercian Activities Committee was told yesterday that the Labor Youth League, described as a Communist organization, has made headway recently among college and high school students.

It was told that the league has 58 members in Washington, including 16 college students.

With Matthew Cvetic, an FBI undercover agent, on the stand, documents were introduced showing what Counsel Frank C. Tavenner, jr. called "a substantial increase" in the membership.

Found in Wrecked Auto

One document found in a wrecked car in Pittsburgh reported that the Labor Youth League, described by Cvetic as completely controlled by Communists, had a membership of 3660 last December 5. Another document, undated, reported a membership of 5879, with most of the gain among college and high school students. Tavenner said the second document probably was for about mid-February.

Cvetic also said the Civil Rights Congress in western Pennsylvania is run by Communists.

As he did in previous testimony, Cvetic again identified Harold (Sonny) Orzick as the master-mind in the campaign to lure young people into the Labor Youth League. He identified Lillian Lewis as its organizational secretary.

Tavenner brought out that Lillian Lewis was among the persons riding in a car when it struck a safety pylon in Pittsburgh February 25. The car yielded many documents about the Youth League. These were turned over to committee investigators by Pittsburgh police.

Among the documents were writings of Marx, Lenin and Stalin. Cvetic said these were used by

2 Baby Elephants Grow Too Fast; To Travel by Ship

Those two baby elephants which had so much trouble making weight for an airplane ride probably will come here via slow boat to New York, the Indian Embassy announced yesterday.

Ashok and Shanti, Prime Minister Nehru's gifts to the Washington Zoo, will travel on the surface unless " a big enough airplane appears out of the blue and offers to do the job gratis," T. N. Kaul, first secretary of the Indian Embassy, said.

Otherwise they'll take a boat next week and will dock at New York in about six weeks. An anonymous donor, whom Kaul describes as an American fond of children and animals, has offered to transport the elephants free aboard ship.

Offered as symbols of peace, the Mysore jungle natives snarled up transportation by going on an eating spree after they arrived in Bombay to await shipment.

Weighing 500 pounds each fresh caught, Ashtok and Shanti just about doubled their weights in Bombay. The air transport fare mounted accordingly from $3000 to $6000.

Pitching of Yacht Keeps President, Aides in Bunks

Aboard Presidential Escort U. S. S. William C. Lawe, March 13 (AP).—White-capped waves gave President Truman's yacht Williamsburg a sound shaking today as it sailed past Cape Hatteras carrying the Chief Executive to a three-week vacation at Key West, Fla.

Mr. Truman stuck to his bunk all morning. None of his staff members, either, showed up on deck as the yacht and this escort vessel nosed through seas officially described as "rough, with medium waves and extensive white-caps."

The destroyer William C. Lawe pulled to within 500 yards of the Williamsburg so photographers could take pictures as the yacht pitched and rolled through the heavy seas.

Answering questions relayed to him by radiotelephone from reporters aboard this vessel, Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said that neither Mr. Truman nor any member of his party was "actively seasick," but that only six showed up for lunch. The President ate in his stateroom while the Williamsburg bounced and twisted in the rough weather off the Carolina coast.

Mr. Truman left Washington yesterday, and is due to arrive at Key West Thursday for a rest at the "Little White House" there.

4 D. C. Policemen Suspended In Connection With Speeding

Four Metropolitan police privates were suspended yesterday, pending trial board action, after a fracas in the Fifth Precinct Station early Sunday morning.

Two face disorderly conduct charges scheduled to be heard Wednesday morning in Municipal Court, and one of the two also faces a charge of speeding at 50 miles per hour.

The two who face court charges are:

Pvt. John Roy, 24, of 1022 12th st. se., attached to the Fourteenth Precinct, charged with disorderly conduct and speeding.

Pvt. Burtell M. Jefferson, 25, of 214 C st. nw., attached to the Ninth Precinct, a passenger of Roy's car, charged with disorderly conduct.

Also suspended as a result of what happened at the station house after they had taken Roy in on a speeding charge were:

Pvt. Daniel R. Gonzales, 22, who was in Scout Car 51, of the Fifth Precinct.

Pvt. Joseph D. Thornton, 32, of 5605 U st., Bradbury Village, Md., signal system officer at the Fifth Precinct.

Inspector George Wallrodt, night official commanding the department at the time, suspended the four men, and made a preliminary report yesterday in the case to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police. As a result,

Manassas Theater, 2 Stores Heavily Damaged by Fire

Manassas, Va., March 14 (Tuesday).—Fire which raged out of control for over an hour, threatening the entire downtown business section, was brought under control early today.

The blaze gutted the Pitts Theater and damaged heavily an adjoining restaurant and hardware store in the same block.

W. C. Sadd, manager of the Stonewall Jackson Hotel, said the theater and its furnishings were valued in excess of $100,000.

Over 100 firemen and volunteers from seven companies fought the fire which for a time showered the Stonewall Jackson Hotel with sparks, forcing 20 guests to the street.

Officials said the fire originated in the two-story brick Pitts Theater shortly after 11 p. m. The movie house, one of a chain owned by State Senator Benjamin Pitts of Fredericksburg, seats 500 persons and was empty at the time.

A heavy wind whipped the flames to the adjoining buildings. Manassas firefighters battled stubbornly until water was exhausted from the 6-inch water main.

The fire gained headway until water-bearing trucks from Warrenton and Triangle fire companies arrived.

Other equipment answered the alarm from Fairfax, Chantilly, Herndon, Gainesville and Nokesville.

Senate Sends CCC Bill to Committee

Bowing to protests from Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, the Senate sent back to its Agriculture Committee yesterday a bill hiking the Commodity Credit Corporation's borrowing power by two billion dollars.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, told the Senate Brannan complained an amendment by Senator Thye (R., Minn.) is so broad that it would hamstring the CCC's grain storage program.

"With that amendment, the bill would be worse than the measure passed by the Eightieth Congress which cut off the grain storage construction program," Lucas said.

Democrats made that measure, passed by the Republican Congress, an issue in President Truman's successful campaign of 1948.

Thye sponsored an amendment approved by the committee under which the CCC would be directed to work through dealers and commission merchants and use customary trade channels in buying, warehousing, transporting and handling farm commodities.

Thye told the Senate that small grain cooperatives and other farmers' organizations in his State are complaining that they can't get their money out of the CCC and want the grain taken by the Government agency to be handled by commercial dealers.

Lucas said the Agriculture Committee will call Brannan to testify about the bill.

Senator Butler (R., Nebr.) said he wants the other side to be represented in testimony.

Bill Seeks Sale By VA of Tract In Arlington

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) yesterday introduced a House bill to make the Veterans Administration sell the Nevius tract in Arlington County to private purchasers.

Smith said he understands the Veterans Administration has dropped its plan for a hospital on the Nevius site. He said he introduced the bill at the request of the Arlington County Board so that the property would be returned to the tax rolls.

He was asked whether any particular private group had expressed an interest in buying the 25-acre tract and he said "not to my knowledge."

Public Inquiry Ordered Into Plane Crash

Cardiff, Wales, March 13 (AP)—Britain ordered a full public inquiry today into history's greatest air disaster—the crash of the chartered airliner that killed 80 persons near here yesterday.

Lord Pakenham, Minister of Civil Aviation, through his chief parliamentary secretary, announced in Commons he had ordered a court of inquiry to attempt to fix the cause of the crash which ruined the triumphant homecoming of Welsh football fans.

Lord Pakenham had hurried to the scene for a personal inspection.

Air Force Marshal Donald Bennett, who left active service to enter commercial aviation, also examined the shattered plane. He said last night "as far as I can see everything was in correct order. The 83 people on board was a load well within the certificate of airworthiness requirements for this particular machine."

The giant Tudor airliner has been dogged by misfortune. Two earlier versions of the plane disappeared on trans-Atlantic flights.

No date has been set for the public inquiry. Owners of the plane probed the twisted remnants strewn in a field only 60 yards from the edge of Llandow airfield.

King George and Prime Minister Clement Attlee led the nation in mourning the death of 75 Welshmen and five crewmen who met their death when the plane undershot the airport.

Only three of the 83 persons aboard survived the crash and one of the three is in a critical condition.

Holober Execution Delayed to May 15

Eelectrocution of Charles F. Holober, convicted slayer of his wife, has been stayed to May 15 by Fairfax County Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown, it was learned yesterday. He was to have been executed Wednesday.

Judge Brown granted the stay after T. Brooke Howard, Holober's attorney, filed notice of intention to appeal the death verdict to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals. Holober was accused of burying his infant daughter but was not tried for this crime.

Few of 21 Reorganization Plans Face Fight

functions of the commission. A new Maritime Administration would handle the commission's other functions.

2. Abolish the independent status given the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board by the Taft-Hartley Act, and transfer his functions to the board itself. NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham has long been at odds with the board over his authority to handle NLRB cases in the courts.

3. Strengthen the Labor Department by making it responsible for coordination of the enforcement of wages and hours legislation affecting Federal or Federally-financed contracts. In another strengthening shift, the Bureau of Employes' Compensation and the Employes' Compensation Appeals Board would be transferred from the Federal Security Agency to the Labor Department.

Latent opposition centered mainly around details of these three proposals. Legislative handlers of the merger moves said some contest also may develop around another proposal shifting advance planning of nonpublic works and disposal of war public works from the new General Services Administration to the Housing and Home Finance Agency. Proposals affecting lines of authority in regulatory boards and commissions will also come in for close scrutiny, these informants said.

Other reorganization plans submitted by the President would:

Transfer to the heads of six departments—Treasury, Justice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor—functions and powers now conferred on subordinate officials. Administrative Assistant Secretaries would be created in each of these departments under the six plans effecting this shift.

Fix administrative responsibility in the chairmen of these regulatory boards and commissions rather than in the board members collectively—Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Federal Power Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Communications Commission, National Labor Relations Boards and the Civil Aeronautics Board. The President hereafter would name the chairmen. Regulatory and policy-making functions, however, would be left undisturbed.

Five of the plans dealt with the organizational pattern of the new General Services Administration. The administrator of this agency would receive increased authority over acquisition and control of Federal office space, particularly outside the District, and in addition be made responsible for preservation and publication of certain public documents.

Six programs involving public works, community facilities and school aid would be transferred from the General Service Administration to other agencies. For example, assistance to school districts overburdened by Federal activities and certain water pollution control functions would be shifted to the Federal Security agency.

Coupled with six reorganization plans cleared by Congress last year, Mr. Truman said the 21 new recommendations would put into effect "almost half" of the Hoover Commission's proposals, and he will submit more later this year.

"Reorganization and modernization of the Government may never be called complete," he told Congress.

"I am confident, however, that these plans will take us well along the road toward more effective, economical and responsible Government."

No Flat Estimate on Savings

Mr. Truman submitted no flat estimate of economies involved but suggested sums ranging from "modest" to "substantial" could be saved.

Under the Reorganization Act, only one of the two Houses need disapprove a plan to block it, but rejection must be by a "constitutional majority" of that House. In other words, the Senate would have to muster 49 votes against a plan, or a majority of 218 in the House, to stop it.

Of the seven plans submitted last year, only one was thus "vetoed"—Mr. Truman's recommendation for a new Department of Welfare and Education, with a Secretary in the Cabinet.

He is expected to renew that proposal later this year, along with another equally controversial—transfer of civil functions of the Army's Corps of Engineers to the Interior Department.

Hearings May Be Held

One usually well-informed Capitol source suggested the Administration may have deliberately held back for the time being the more controversial proposals in order to speed clearance of the bulk of his recommendations.

Senator McClellan, whose Expenditures Committee will handle the merger proposals in the Senate yesterday directed his committee staff to analyze the 21 plans, comparing the proposals with the Hoover originals.

He said he will hold hearings on the separate proposals only if (1) substantial opposition develops in his committee or (2) a resolution of disapproval is introduced.

Where no major controversy develops he said he will ask his committee to submit favorable reports to the Senate, even though specific approval by the committee is not required.

Most Decline Comment

McClellan announced personal opposition only to the proposal to shift what he termed "community planning" activities to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

A former member of the Hoover commission, he said he never anticipated any "large dollar savings" would flow from its recommendations, but predicted "better, more efficient government" should result.

Most members simply declined comment, saying they had not had time to read the voluminous 23 messages explaining the 21 plans.

Potentially one of the most controversial appeared to be proposed abolition of the job of NLRB general counsel, since it involved a provision of the Taft-Hartley Act, which the President has pledged to have repealed.

Taft Agreed Last Year

Mr. Truman noted, however, that the Senate last year "indicated its approval of this step." What the Senate did was approve a new version of the Taft-Hartley Act, largely acceptable to Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio). Taft at that time went along with elimination of the independent NLRB general counsel's post. He has not yet stated his position on the merger plan follow up.

There was potential opposition from shipping interests and seacoast legislators, to the President's proposal to transfer the Maritime commission, the world's biggest merchant fleet operation, to the Commerce department.

Under this plan, the present five-member Maritime commission would be liquidated and the proposed new "Maritime Administration" would supervise the building, selling and chartering of merchant vessels. A separate three man board, also under the department, would grant ship subsidies and regulate rates.

Cabinet Officers' Powers

Perhaps the President's most sweeping proposals were contained in the first six plans giving half-a-dozen Cabinet officers detailed powers with the force of law over everyone and "all functions of all agencies" in their departments.

Semi-autonomous bureaus, such as the FBI, the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureaus of Mines and Reclamation thus could be kept firmly under contro' of their respective Cabinet heads.

In support of these recommendations, the President quoted Hoover Commission's initial report, urging "a clear line of command from the top to the bottom, and a return line of responsibility and accountability from the bottom to the top."

More Assistant Secretaries

Besides providing Administrative Assistant Secretaries, chosen from the career Civil Service, in each of the six departments, the plans submitted yesterday call for three additional assistant secretaries—one in the Interior Department and two in the Agriculture Department.

Another recommendation changes the title of the Assistant to the Attorney General to Deputy Attorney General. An additional Assistant Attorney General is provided in lieu of the Assistant Solicitor General, the latter office being abolished.

Commenting on the pooled recommendations, Dr. Robert L. Johnson, president of Temple University and head of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, said:

"Important as these 21 plans of the President are, we must not lose sight of the fact that they represent only a portion of the sweeping reform throughout the executive branch recommended by the Hoover Commission, nor should we forget that legislation is required to fully effect many readjustments the commission found necessary . . ."

State Officials Urge Hike in U. S. Road Aid

By The Associated Press

The American Association of State Highway Officials urged Congress yesterday to boost proposed Federal aid to roads by 240 million dollars a year.

A bill before the House Public Works Committee calls for 500 million dollars a year in Federal aid for main roads, secondary routes and those which run through urban areas. It also proposes 70 million dollars a year for two years for aid to interstate highways.

D. C. Greer, State highway engineer of Texas and president of the National Association, told the committee the highway system needs 600 million dollars a year for the main, secondary and urban system. He recommended a continuing program of 210 million dollars a year for the interstate system.

Greer said the main highways should have 270 million dollars a year instead of 225 million dollars progosed in the bill; secondary roads 180 million dollars instead of 150 million dollars, and urban routes 150 million dollars instead of 125 million dollars.

His testimony drew from Representative Pickett (D., Tex.), a committee members, a suggestion that "maladministration and disadministration" in State highway departments complicates their work and swells the costs of highway programs.

Greer's recommendations received the support of J. A. Anderson, Virginia State highway commissioner; Charles M. Ziegler, Michigan highway commissioner; S. T. Roebuck, Chairman of the Mississippi Highway Commission, and F. R. White, Iowa highway commissioner.

Museum to Show Copy of 'Largest' Carving of Head

New York, March 13 (AP).—The American Museum of Natural History has a big head today—bigger than anyone ever had before on a Monday.

It is 9 feet high, 6 feet wide and 20 feet around.

It is a plaster duplicate of a 30-ton human head carved in stone in southern Mexico about the time of Christ.

It was made by the La Venta, a culture that vanished before the better-known Mayans and Aztecs.

Prof. Matthew W. Stirling of the National Geographic-Smithsonian Institution expedition to southern Mexico found the original head in 1946, lying in the jungle with its face to the sky. It probably is the largest stone likeness of a human head ever found in the new world.

Because it was too big to handle, the museum arranged to make plaster casts in sections. These are being assembled here and painted to duplicate the original. It will be ready for exhibition in about a month.

U. S. Rejects European Radio Shifts

Frankfurt, Germany, March 13 (AP).—The United States today rejected an attempt by Russia and other European nations to reassign radio frequencies in Germany's American zone and adopted a new list of its own.

American officials charged that a Copenhagen radio convention at which Russia and other countries voted to reassign frequencies throughout Europe "made no adequate provisions for the continuation of the broadcasting services in the United States Zone of Germany and the United States sector of Berlin."

American officials said they took this step because the Copenhagen pact could wreck United States propaganda broadcasts in the cold war. Earlier, American authorities called the Copenhagen agreement a major defeat for American broadcasting and for the West in its verbal war with the Communists.

Although the United States is financing west Europe's recovery and security, the big European powers, including Russia, snatched most of the powerful frequencies in west Germany at the Copenhagen conference.

"The United States is not a signatory of the plan and stated its objections at the time it was signed by the European powers and on frequent occasions since," a United States High Commission announcement said.

4 More Are Tagged 'Red' by McCarthy

not afford to spend so much time before the subcommittee. He would give it every morning, but needed afternoons and nights to prepare his case, he intimated.

Furthermore, he said, he had changed his mind about the time it would take to complete his presentation. Rather than the four or five hours he had thought, it would take at least three more morning sessions.

Hearing Slated Today

Tydings concurred, and has him scheduled to continue at 9:30 a. m. today. He will be followed about noon by Dorothy Kenyon, former U. S. representative to a U. N. commission, which McCarthy last week said was immersed in deep-rooted Communist activities.

Another person accused by McCarthy last week of "unusual affinity" for Communist causes is United States Ambassador-at-Large Phillip C. Jessup. In Paris yesterday, Dr. Jessup said he is cutting short his Far Eastern talks with European officials to fly back to Washington.

He will arrive Wednesday and has said he would be glad to appear before the subcommittee to dispose "of the allegation that I am friendly toward Communism."

In passing, McCarthy yesterday blasted Secretary of State Acheson for shifting the "onus" of the loyalty exposures to the shoulders "of a harmless and likeable young man by the name of John Peurifoy," Deputy Under Secretary.

McCarthy said he wanted to know when "Acheson will have guts enough to stand up and say, 'This is my baby.'"

It has been Peurifoy who has so far issued State Department answers to McCarthy's charges.

'Big Shot' Unidentified

McCarthy did not say which of his cases yesterday was the "phenomenal" one about a State Department "big shot" that he promised last week.

The best-known name of the four he mentioned was that of Lattimore. McCarthy conceded he was not a full-time Federal employe, but pointed to a number of temporary advisory or consultative posts he held there.

He said Lattimore's "pro-Communist record goes back many years." In proof, he cited this evidence.

1. He was a member of the board of the magazine "Amerasia," headed by Frederick Vanderbilt Field, a prominent "money bags" for many Communist publications.

2. He was accused by Frank C. Waldrup, editorial director of The Washington Times-Herald, of characterizing the Russian purges of 1936-39 as "a triumph of democracy," and of casting doubt on General MacArthur's policies as Supreme Commander in Japan.

3. He was a trustee of the Institute of Pacific Relations, along with Field and several other pro-Communists.

At this point Tydings interrupted to read the rest of the officers and trustees. They included Henry R. Luce, of Time, Inc.; Robert G. Sproul, president of the University of California; Ray Lyman Wilbur, formerly in President Hoover's Cabinet; Paul G. Hoffman, present Economic Cooperation Administrator; former Under Secretary of State Sumner Wells; Juan Trippe, head of Pan-American Airlines, and several other prominent figures.

4. Lattimore spoke on the same platform with Field, and under the auspices of the Washington Committee for Aid to China, on February 11, 1941.

What McCarthy did not say, but what was revealed by an examiner of the handbill announcing the meeting, was that the subject of the talk was an appeal to stop further shipments to Japan.

5. He and Mrs. Lattimore were sponsors of the Maryland Association for Democratic Rights, an affiliate of the National Emergency Conference for Democratic Rights. This latter organization was called "subversive" in April, 1943, by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Maryland Citizens Listed

Tydings pointed out that other sponsors included many well-respected Maryland citizens whom he, Tydings, knew. McCarthy agreed. He added, although he did not demonstrate that Lattimore was not, however, a "dupe who joined my mistake," but rather was one who duped other, well-intentioned people to join.

6. He was the representative in October, 1943, of the Office of War Information, at a meeting of the Writers' Congress and the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization. The latter was classed as subversize by the Attorney General four years later.

The rest of McCarthy's case against Lattimore was a 3700-word article from the Knights of Columbus magazine by the Rev. James F. Kearney, S.J., which McCarthy read into the record. It bitterly assailed Lattimore as the architect of a China policy that Father Kearney considered was wrong and that had disastrous results.

McCarthy did not indicate what the priest's qualifications were as a Far Eastern expert. Lattimore, now head of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins, has lived many years in China and has written nine books about the Far East. He is considered by many as the greatest American authority on Chinese and Mongolian affairs.

In Baltimore yesterday, Mrs. Lattimore, a foreign affairs expert in her own right, declared:

"First of all, my husband has never been a State Department consultant or official of any sort—never on the State Department payroll.

"Second, he has never been a Communist, nor a pro-Communist. He is an anti-Communist.

"Persons have criticized him because he has pointed out many shortcomings in the Nationalist government of China. He did this earlier than most non-Chinese, and most of what he said has now come to be recognized as fact.

"But he has never spoken in support of the Chinese Communists. He regards a Communist rule in China as unfortunate both for China and for the United States."

In making his case against Haldore Hanson, McCarthy intimated the young State Department official would have tremendous powers in the new "Point Four" program for undeveloped areas.

From McCarthy's description of his position, however, it appeared that he was a subordinate official in what is still a shadow organization. He is to be chief of a staff for "Technical Cooperation Projects" in an as yet interim office of "Technical Cooperation and Development," headed by a former Agriculture Department official.

Case Against Hanson

The case against Hanson was that after two years as an Associated Press reporter and "stringer" in the Far East, he wrote a "pro-Communist" book in 1939, and formerly edited a Communist magazine in Peiping.

McCarthy said, "This man clearly believes that the Communists in China stand for everything good." He added that Hanson "has the attitude of a hero worshipper for the Chinese Communist leaders," and is a "man with a mission—a mission to communize the world."

The quotations that McCarthy cited from Hanson's book do not quite paint this picture.

In passages McCarthy cited, Hanson praises the discipline and integrity of the Communist leadership in their war against the Japanese in 1937-39, finds much to admire in the character of Mao Tse-tung, present head of Red China, and says that some of the other Red generals made "good company."

At the State Department yesterday, Hanson said he was 27 when he wrote the book, and although he did not apologize for the kind of newsman he was, he did not know whether he would write the same thing now.

At that time, he pointed out, he spent six months with the Communist guerillas, and wrote of them in the context of their war effort against Japan. His book also contained his description of nine months with the Japanese troops and six with the Nationalist forces.

He said he was arrested by the Japanese three times in 1937 and 1938 while trying to smuggle his dispatches to the Associated Press.

His dispatches were reprinted, he said, in a full page of Time magazine and again in the Reader's Digest. He denied he edited the Communist magazine in Peiping, but said his name appeared on the editorial board on the last issue only.

McCarthy identified Mrs. Brunauer as an assistant to Alger Hiss, now convicted of perjury in connection with a Russian espionage ring, at the time of the San Francisco conference setting up the United Nations.

McCarthy repeatedly told the subcommittee that this case demanded "immediate attention," but his actual charge against her was only that her "Communist front activities . . . are sufficient to seriously question her security status."

Six Exhibits Given

He gave six exhibits to the subcommittee listing her affiliations, mostly from 1936 to 1939, in organizations subsequently classified as subversive.

Tydings took one of the exhibits, showing her a signer of a call to the annual meeting of the American Youth Congress in 1938, and pointed out that other names included several Senators and Representatives, and former Postmaster General James A. Farley.

The State Department, meanwhile, yesterday said she had been thoroughly investigated and vouched for by many people prominent in public life, and that the department is "satisfied that she is loyal to the United States and does not constitute a security risk."

In a statement issued through the State Department, Mrs. Brunauer said that she deeply resents McCarthy's charges and is confident the Senate investigation will find he has "been very badly misinformed."

"I am not and never have been and could not possibly be a Communist," she said. "It would be completely foreign to my character. I am a loyal American and a loyal officer of the State Department."

She went on to say that the Russians she has constantly tangled with in UNESCO meetings would scarcely consider her pro-Communist. She also said her husband was "vigorously anti-Communist."

Her husband's name was brought up by McCarthy in discussing her case. He said he would not go into details about him in public session, but implied he had been under constant Government investigation, that he had admitted membership in the Communist Party and was a close friend and collaborator of Communists.

At the Navy Department, Brunauer vigorously denied this. He said his loyalty was checked three times by various agencies when he took different jobs in the Government and when he became a commissioned officer in the Navy.

The Navy Department itself put out a statement saying that as a commander in the Naval Reserve and as a civilian employe of the Bureau of Ordnance, Dr. Brunauer had been "thoroughly investigated."

It added, "As a result of this investigation, as administrative decision was made that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant Dr. Brunauer being charged with disloyalty.

"While a commissioned officer during the war and later as civilian employe, Dr. Brunauer has made noteworthy contributions in the field of explosives. He is regarded as an eminent expert and his ability in the field of research is highly regarded."

Dr. Brunauer was born in Hungary and was naturalized as an American citizen in 1927.

White Man Fined Under 'Jim Crow' Law

Asheville, N. C., March 13 (AP).—A white man, Kenneth Evans of nearby Hendersonville, was fined $25 and costs today by Judge Sam Cathey in Police Court for violation of the "Jim Crow" law. Evans pleaded guilty to demanding service Saturday in a Negro cafe.

The court suspended a 30-day jail sentence on payment of fine and costs.

"I guess I'll have to learn some things all over again," Evans told Judge Cathey. He said he had spent eight years in the Navy and lived in Minnesota before returning to North Carolina several months ago.

Defense Items Make Up Half of Pakistan Budget

Karachi, Pakistan, March 13 (U.P.).—Almost half of the state budget for 1950-51 will be spent on defense services, according to the third annual Pakistan budget presented to Parliament today.

The total budget will be 1,155,400,000 rupees (about 350 million dollars) with 500 million earmarked for the military.

Ho Chi-minh Reported On Visit to Moscow

Paris, March 13 (AP).—The semi-official French Press Agency said today it had leraned in Saigon, Indo-China, that Ho Chi-minh, rebel head of the Soviet-recognized "Viet-Nam republic," has left his headquarters to visit Peiping, China, and Moscow.

Maryland Anti-Red Law Put Into Effect

Baltimore, March 13 (AP).—Maryland's anti-subversive Ober Law, which requires all public employes to sign loyalty oaths, went into effect again today.

Complying with a mandate from the Court of Appeals—the State's highest tribunal—Judge Joseph A. Sherbow of the Baltimore Supreme Bench signed a decree bringing the law to life.

The high court had overruled Sherbow's decision that the law was unconstitutional.

Besides requiring the loyalty oath of any public employe, including teachers, the law makes it a crime to belong to subversive organizations.

Attorney General Hall Hammond said he will appoint a special assistant to supervise enforcement of the law, which bears the name of Frank B. Ober, Baltimore attorney who headed a committee which drafted it.

[Employes of nearby Maryland counties and municipalities signed the oath when it first became effective last June. A few who have been employed since the act became the subject of court action have not signed, officials said.

[Whether the original oaths will be legal now or will have to be taken again is a question that Attorney General Hammond will have to decide, officials said.]

Coal Price Boost, 10-40 Cents a Ton, Is Being Prepared

Pittsburgh, March 13 (AP).—Spokesmen for the strike-weary soft coal industry today cautiously admitted they're preparing to tack a 10 to 40-cent hike per ton on the price of the fuel.

Whether the increase will be passed on to consumers, the spokesmen said, depends on just what the boost amounts to.

When the United Mine Workers' long strike against the industry ended a week ago, operators forecast the probability of a raise in prices.

Said an official who declined to be quoted by name:

"If it (the increase) only amounts to ten cents a ton, the retailer should be able to absorb it.

"But if it goes any higher it will affect the price of coal to the consumer."

Conferees Settle Nothing on Bill

A Senate-House conference on legislation extending price supports to additional acreages of cotton, wheat and peanuts failed to finish its job yesterday and Representative Cooley (D., N. C.) said "we haven't settled a thing."

Another meeting was scheduled for this afternoon.

Cooley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, indicated that the chief stumbling block is cotton. Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee declined to see newsmen.

Two Quit Race Against Morse

Salem, Oreg., March 13 (AP).—Two opponents of Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) today withdrew from the Oregon Republican primary in favor of another candidate.

Fred Robinson, Medford clothier, and Earl Dickson, Albany grocer, withdrew. Both explained they believed Dave Hoover, a Lane County farmer, adequately represented their views.

Still in the campaign are Hoover and John McBride, a Portlander who currently is a clerk for a congressional committee.

Rodianov Appointed Red Envoy to Sweden

Moscow, March 13 (AP).—Soviet Russia has named one of her top-flight diplomats, Konstantin K. Rodianov, Ambassador to Sweden.

An official announcement said Rodianov replaces Alexander Abramov, who was relieved because of illness.

Highest Court Takes Loyalty Program Case

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court agreed yesterday to consider a charge that the Government's loyalty program—and especially the Attorney General's subversive list—is unconstitutional.

The charge turned down in the lower courts, was brought to the high court by the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, one of the groups listed as Communist.

The Court has yet to act on a similar petition by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc., also seeking to have its name stricken from the subversive list.

Justice Clark, who compiled the list while he was Attorney General, took no part in yesterday's action and presumably will not sit in the case.

Upheld in Appeals Court

The Government contended it is unnecessary to consider constitutionality and that the league failed to allege any specific threat to its members of discharge from Government service. Membership in a group called subversive is one ground that "may" be cited for discharge.

The United States Court of Appeals here last August ruled, 2-to-1, that the loyalty program was perfectly legal. The Court noted that President Truman's executive order setting up the program was designed to carry out the provisions of the Hatch Act and it held that the Attorney General was acting for the President. The majority added:

"Had the President performed the task himself, his acts could not have been challenged legally."

A dissent by Judge Henry W. Edgerton contended that the facts in the case—the reasons why the league was placed on the subversive list—had not been tried. This, in part, was the league's contention in asking the Supreme Court review. The league also argued that the listing "stigmatized" its members and that because of the constant addition of names to the list all groups in the Nation must "beware of offending the political sensibilities of the Attorney General."

Other Actions Taken

In other actions yesterday, the Supreme Court:

1. Agreed to hear an attack by two members of the Jehovah's Witnesses on the Havre de Grace, Md., "custom" of requiring licenses to speak in the city park. The two were arrested and fined for attempting to speak on religious subjects after the city council refused permission. Councilmen stated the sect was made up of "people who refuse to salute the flag" and would not bear arms "in defense of the country."

2. Turned down a Texas request to defer the already long-delayed argument in the tidelands oil case. Both the Texas and Louisiana cases will be heard March 27. The Justice Department, in opposing the Texas request, contended the State was engaging in "dilatory tactics."

3. Ruled, 8-to-0, that the Circuit Court of Appeals had acted wrongly in releasing an American soldier serving a prison term in Atlanta, Ga., after a murder conviction by a court martial in Germany. Justice Clark's opinion said the lower court should not even have reviewed the case of Pvt. Eugene Preston Brown. Clark said the civil courts, in a habeas corpus proceeding such as this case, "exercise no supervisory or correcting power over the proceedings of a court martial."

State Court Upheld on Strike

4. Threw out an appeal by an AFL union from a Minnesota State Supreme Court decision upholding that State's right to forbid a strike intended to force an employer to compel his workers to join the union. The high court merely dismissed the appeal with the statement that the State court decision was based "upon a non-Federal ground adequate to support it."

5. Refused to consider an international child custody fight involving the Roman Catholic Church and Soviet Russia. Attorneys for Hamportzoon Choolokian, once an American citizen, had sought to force two church institutions in New York to release his three American-born children so they could join him and his wife in Soviet Armenia. The Soviet Government in a memorandum to the State Department charged this nation with "detaining" the three children "in spite of their parents' categorical demands." The church institutions contended the parents signed affidavits asking the children to be baptized and raised as Catholics. That is what now will happen.

6. Ruled, 7-to-1, that California may prevent residents of that State from willing gifts to the Federal Government. Justice Reed delivered the opinion in a case involving a $35,000 bequest and Justice Black dissented.

Railroad Liability

7. Ruled, 6-to-1, that railroads are liable for damages to shipments originating in foreign nations. Justice Minton delivered the opinion, Justice Frankfurter dissented and Justices Jackson and Douglas took no part.

8. Held, 5 to 3, that the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad is not entitled to a new trial in a damage suit. An injured switchman was awarded $80,000. Justice Clark spoke for the majority with Justices Reed, Frankfurter and Jackson dissenting.

9. Refused to review a Washington State Supreme Court ruling that pinball machines are gambling devices as forbidden in a 41-year-old State law. The Supreme Court dismissed the appeal on the grounds it had no jurisdiction to consider the case, an interpretation of State law.

10. Declined to enter a case in which Parisian Countess Anne Vilberg de Sairigne has been attempting to collect $400,000 from Frank Jay Gould. She contended Gould, son of the famous financier, gave her a check for that amount for protecting him from the Nazis but that he later stopped payment. The lower courts threw out her suit.

7th Fleet to Visit Saigon on Thursday

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

American warships will extend their "show-the-flag" visits to another trouble-torn part of the world — Southeastern Asia — this weekend.

Vessels of the Seventh Fleet will put into Saigon, capital of newly-recognized Viet Nam, for a courtesy visit March 16 to 20, the Navy announced yesterday.

At the same time, naval fighter and attack planes from the aircraft carrier Boxer will fly air parades over principal cities of the new French Union states set up in Indo-China.

Officials hope this tangible evidence of American power and support of democratic forces will have the same success similar visits by United States carrier task forces have had in the Mediterranean during the past four years.

Berkey at Saigon Thursday

Vice Admiral Russell S. Berkey, commander of the Seventh Fleet, will arrive at Saigon aboard the destroyer Stickell on Thursday. Accompanying the vessel will be the destroyer Richard B. Anderson.

His Majesty Bao Dai, formerly Emperor of Annam and now Chief of the State of Viet Nam, will welcome Berkey at the Governor's Palace at Saigon and calls also will be exchanged Thursday with the French High Commissioner. Twenty-one-gun salutes will be fired for the French Union and the newly affiliated State of Viet Nam.

Berkey will fly to Phom-Penh, capital of Combodia, to be received by its king, His Majesty Norodom Shinouk, March 20. Due to lack of time, the Navy said, the admiral will not visit Laos, the other French Union state recognized by the United States February 7.

Planes Over Cities

While the carrier Boxer will not enter port, its planes will fly over the cities of Hue, Tourane, Saigon and Phnon-Penh. A feature of the visit will be a night tiger hunt staged by Bao Dai for the visiting naval officers. Commenting on the visit, Berkey said:

"At a time when the exponents of conflicting ideologies stand face to face in the troubled East, it is an honor to represent the United States Navy and American people in paying our respects to the newest of Eastern states to join the ranks of independent freedom-loving peoples.

"It is hoped that this exchange of courtesy calls and honors will help assure the populace of Indo-China of America's sympathy with their struggle to establish and maintain a government based on democratic principles."

On Atlantic Union

State Dept. Is Assailed By Kefauver

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) yesterday accused the State Department of a "shocking and alarming lack of vision" for its opposition to a proposed union of North Atlantic nations.

"If we drift into another war," Kefauver said, "it will be because those responsible for keeping the peace lacked vision; because they could not see the danger when the cloud was small; because measures were not taken to remove the cloud while there was still time."

Kefauver urged the Senate to approve a resolution calling on this country to summon a convention of Atlantic Pact democracies for the purpose of discussing a federal union. He made clear that he thinks Congress should ignore the State Department's advice on the matter.

"After all, we are close to the people," Kefauver declared. "Such is not the case with the personnel of the Department of State."

He accused the department of having fumbled the waging of the cold war, commenting that "we merely hold our own in Europe, while we are losing much in Asia."

Kefauver's speech was prompted by the testimony of Deputy Undersecretary of State Dean Rusk and Assistant Secretary John D. Hickerson before a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee.

They opposed the Atlantic Union resolution sponsored by the Tennessee lawmaker and 19 other Senators, on the ground that it poses a number of questions that must be settled first.

Kefauver said the effect of Hickerson's remarks is that "the State Department has decided that the people are not ready for this convention and that we must have faith in its judgment." The Senator added:

"How imprudent, as the State Department implicitly does, to assume that the next 10 months will be fair-weather sailing!

"How dangerously rash to conclude that we must hasten to explore every way to make the hydrogen bomb, but that we have no time to explore the free federal way to keep it from wrecking the world."

Fuchs Seen Possible Link To Red A-Blast

Atomic Energy Commissioner Lewis L. Strauss said yesterday he would not be surprised if there was a "relationship" between Russia's atomic explosion last fall and secrets given the Soviets by Dr. Klaus Fuchs.

Strauss, who is resigning from the commission on April 15, emphasized he did not know what information Russia received from the German-born British scientist, who confessed to giving atomic secrets to Russia and was sentenced to 14 years in prison.

He made the statement in a copyrighted interview with United States News and World Report, independent weekly magazine published here.

He said it is generally recognized that scientific "secrets" do not long remain secret, but stressed that there is such a thing as "secrets in point of time, even if they are eventually discovered by others." These secrets, he said, must be guarded.

"I am discounting the theft of secrets by espionage," he added. "When that happens, our own carelessness or overconfidence is to blame."

Strauss said that as long "as we live in a world where force may be the last argument," there must be "security of information" concerning weapons—"the more devastating the weapon, the more important security becomes."

Judith Coplon To Go Free on Bail of $40,000

New York, March 13 (AP).—Convicted spy Judith Coplon won freedom today in $40,000 bail.

United States Court of Appeals Judge Thomas W. Swan set the bail after Valentin A. Gubitchev, convicted with Miss Coplon of plotting to spy for the Russians, announced he would bow to the wishes of the United States Government and return to Russia.

Miss Coplon will go free in the same amount of bail that was posted for her before her conviction. She is appealing that conviction and an earlier verdict of guilty on charges of stealing Government secrets for the Russians.

Gubitchev said he would sail March 20 aboard the Gydnia-America liner Batory, the ship on which the former Communist underground leader, Gerhart Eisler, fled this country last year.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan sentenced Gubitchev and Miss Coplon to 15 years in prison each last Thursday.

But, on the recommendation of Secretary of State Acheson and Attorney General J. Howard Mcgrath, he offered to suspend Gubitchev's sentence if the Russian left for home, "never to return."

O'Conor Calls for End To Russian's U. N. Pay

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) demanded yesterday that United Nations salary payments to Valentin A. Gubitchev, convicted of espionage, be halted.

As chairman of the Senate subcommittee dealing with international organizations, O'Conor protested to Secretary of State Acheson "the payment of salary and other perquisites" to Gubitchev.

"It would seem to be an intolerable situation that this Russian spy, indicted over a year ago in connection with his plotting against the United States, should have been allowed to draw his $6000 annual salary over the intervening period," O'Conor said.

O'Conor noted that the United States contributes about 40 percent of the U. N. budget.

O'Conor said an explanation is due from Trygve Lie, U. N. Secretary General, as to why Gubitchev was not suspended without pay when he was indicted. The Senator cited a section of U. N. rules giving Lie such authority.

Caribbean Feuding Blamed on 3 Powers

By The Associated Press

A five-nation fact-finding committee late yesterday turned over to the Council of the Organization of American States a confidential report placing major responsibility for three years of Caribbean feuding on the Dominican Republic, Cuba and Guatemala.

The council decided to release the bulky document at 7 p. m., Sunday, March 19, in order to give the various foreign offices time to receive it ahead of press publication.

The council also agreed to meet again April 3 to begin discussion of the report and the various draft resolutions presented by the fact-finders.

The committee has been working for two months trying to unravel a maze of charges and counter charges of plotting and conspiracy in the Caribbean.

The findings it has reached are described as clear cut and harsh, setting down the facts of the situation without regard for the usual diplomatic niceties.

The crux of the problem is a Haitian charge that the Dominican government aided in a plot to overthrow the Haitian government last November and December. This was denied by the Dominican Republic.

Meantime, the Dominican Republic countercharged that Cuba, Guatemala and Haiti participated in various attempts at armed invasion of the country. The three countries denied this charge.

According to previous reports, the fact finders are understood to have come to the conclusion that Cuba, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic are responsible for the recent political disturbances in the Caribbean.

Haiti was reported to have been absolved of any blame.

Quick Excise Vote Blocked

open for any action the committee sees fit, notwithstanding the President's recommendations.

For instance the committee may add movie tickets and other items to the excise cutting list.

[If and when Congress repeals the excise tax on theater tickets, movie houses in the Washington area will pass along the savings to their customers, A. Julian Brylawski, president of the Theater Owners of Metropolitan D. C., said yesterday.

[He said exery Washington movie theater and those in nearby Maryland and Virginia agreed that full benefit of any tax slash should be passed along to the public.

["If the full 20 percent tax is repealed," he said, "that will mean one ticket free in every five bought at present prices."

[More than 200,000 moviegoers in the Washington area have signed repeal petitions.—Editor's Note.]

It seemed to be a good guess now that the committee will approve a bill cutting excise taxes by about 1 billion dollars and levying offsetting taxes by about the same amount in other directions —without the billion-dolar net increase Mr. Truman suggested.

Falls Church Council Gets New Charter

The new Falls Church charter was presented last night to Mayor Albert Orme and the city council.

Fairfax County Delegate Edwin Lynch made the presentation and called the charter "one of the best received by the Virginia General Assembly for approval this year." The charter was passed by the Assembly March 12.

A. Burke Hertz, commissioner of revenue, was directed to study a proposal to increase the $200 tax on nonresident dry cleaners as a protection for local cleaners.

Mike Byrne, executive secretary of the Falls Church Chamber of Commerce, invited the mayor and council to attend a March 23 meeting at which a "Clean Up-Fix Up" campaign for the city will be organized.

The drive will extend from April 16 to May 13 and is aimed at minimizing fire losses. The meeting will take place at 7:30 p. m., at the Teen Canteen.

Officers to Be Elected

New officers of the Rolling Terrace Civic Association and delegates to the Montgomery County Federation of Civic Associations will be elected at a meeting of the association at 8 p. m. today. It will be at the Silver Spring Health Center, Old Bladensburg rd.

Income Tax Race Now in Final Heat

The corridors of the Bureau of Internal Revenue were crammed yesterday with some 1700 taxpaying citizens seeking advice—this being known at the Bureau as the Season of the Form 1040.

"We would not be here," said one of the patient 1700, "if we could fill it out."

"Yeah," agreed the man behind him. "It's as I say, I sort of get puzzled."

"This," reported a lieutenant in the building's special police, "has been going on since January 2."

It will all be over by Wednesday. By then the season's total—January 2 to March 15—will hit close to last year's 53,000. Not counting yesterday's 1700, an unofficial total, it stood at 50,093.

But yesterday was the heaviest day. Everybody had the same idea: It's raining outside; no one else will show up on a day like this.

So by afternoon the wait was close to two hours—standing up almost all the way.

X-Ray Machines For Shoe Fitting Banned in D. C.

X-ray machines used in fitting shoes were ordered removed from stores yesterday by the District Commission on Medical Licensure.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District health officer and secretary of the commission, said that use of the machines no longer will be permitted here.

He said the machines were found to be harmful to the operators as well as to the customers trying on shoes. Without scientific control and protection the machines give off excessive radiation, he said.

Dr. Sechinger said the commission found no particular advantage in the machines in fitting shoes. Their use, he said, was "more of a fad than anything else."

He added that very few of the shoe-fitting machines are still in use, and he anticipated that the commission will have no difficulty in enforcing its order.

Man Cleared of Cruelty In Docking Dog's Tail

Frank Gamble, 40, a painter, of 407 16th st., se., was acquitted yesterday of cruelty to animals in docking the tail of a puppy.

Lower-Priced Homes Here, FHA Reports

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

FHA testimony that home builders are definitely getting into the lower-priced rental and sales fields yesterday came in the midst of Senate debate on the Administration's "middle-income" housing bill. The testimony was expected to affect Senate debate on the measure.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), leading the battle for the bill, said that despite the admittedly uphill struggle, supporters are "standing pat."

The Federal Housing Administration's comments on the housing situation were released in 1951 budget hearings made public yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee. FHA told the committee 1951 is slated to be "the highest-volume year in the history of FHA operations."

"Home builders," FHA said, "are definitely getting into the lower-priced rental and lower-priced sales field." Cost figures, the agency declared, are down about 10 percent, with no further appreciable drop expected this year.

The Senate is slated to vote on the Administration's new housing program, including cooperatives for middle-income groups, on Wednesday. The House is scheduled to take it up this week. The measure is designed to benefit those earning between $2400 and $4700 yearly.

Senators Harry Cain (R., Wash.) and John Bricker (R., Ohio), leading Senate opponents of the middle-income cooperative provision, already claim sufficient votes to defeat it.

Plan to Speed Service Family Housing Given

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Defense Department's Housing Commission has submitted a plan to speed up housing for service families under the Wherry Act, Chairman Bertrand E. Giesecke said yesterday.

Giesecke told a Senate Armed Forces subcommittee that building of Wherry housing had been seriously delayed by "complicated procedures" within the three services. The commission plan, he said, was designed to simplify those procedures and speed up construction.

Chairman Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.), of the subcommittee pointed out that eight months had elapsed since the Wherry measure, providing for FHA insurance of loans for military housing, became law but only one project had been started.

"When we passed that law," he declared, "we thought we could get results. Now, eight months later those who are aware of what is going on are sadly disappointed. While heads are being knocked together in the Defense Department we hope some heads will be knocked together that will get some houses built."

Giesecke said his commission, with the approval of FHA, the comptroller general and the budget bureau, had recommended that a local architect be selected to draw up plans for each project.

Testimony by representatives of the services showed that the Army has asked proposals on 49 projects, the Navy on 76 and the Air Force on 60. In the majority of these cases the projects are to be constructed at bases on land leased to the sponsor.

Parents Charged With Murder of Baby

from the arms of her mother, who is 5 feet 3 inches tall.

He declared "it takes quite a bit of force to crush a baby's skull."

To fracture the skull in the manner that Eileen's was fractured, he said, would "require force or great strength from without."

After being out for 35 minutes, the jury returned to ask Dr. Murphy how old the fracture was. He told them it was received from 24 to 48 hours before the death, and said it did not occur when Mrs. Kelley said she dropped Eileen.

Mrs. Kelley, who had not previously mentioned dropping the baby Saturday night, told the jury she had not told of it because "I hardly remember anything that happened . . . I was so upset."

She safd she first told her husband of the fall yesterday.

In reply to questioning, Mrs. Kelley said the older child had never shown any jeaousy toward the baby, and said she watched them very closely when they were together.

At the time of the baby's death, her face bore a number of bruises and the lip was cut, it was brought out at the hearing.

These marks first appeared on Eileen's face on Tuesday, Mrs. Kelley testified.

On Friday, she said, she took the baby to Dr. Ashby W. Smith, 2100 North Capitol st., to determine the cause. Similar marks had appeared on the child's face about three weeks ago, but soon disappeared.

Dr. Smith, who had cared for the infant since its birth and made a routine examination of her on March 4, said he questioned Mrs. Kelley about the bruises but found no history of injuries, and suggested a blood disorder.

Anemia Cited

Examination of the baby by Dr. Oscar Benwood Hunter, jr., at his clinic, 1835 7 st. nw., revealed no evidence of blood disease, but "a fairly severe degree of anemia," Dr. Smith told the jury.

Dr. Smith indicated he asked Kelley whether any harm could have come to the child to cause the bruises.

Later, Kelley said he did not remember being so questioned.

Dr. Hunter, who said his tests on the infant ruled out the possibility that the bruises were caused by blood disease, said he believed they were caused by external force.

Police discounted the possibility that the child may have been injured by her sister while playing. Mrs. Kelley told police Saturday night that Elizabeth had not struck Eileen and that examination of the toys revealed no instrument of sufficient force to cause a death.

He expressed the belief that the anemia could have been caused by a post-hemorrhagic anemia.

Saturday, Mrs. Kelley declared, was the first time Eileen had ever fallen.

When she picked up the infant and placed it in a carriage, she said the baby was very quiet and appeared to have stopped breathing. She shook it nad it breathed again.

She said she immediately went to call a neighbor for help. Eileen was pronounced dead at 6:35 p. m. at the Kelley home by Dr. Henry W. Stout, Emergency Hospital ambulance physician, after he and members of Fire Department Rescue Squad 2 unsuccessfully attempted to restore breathing.

Mrs. Kelley said she first learned the child's death was caused by a skull fracture from police officers.

House Kills 2 A. M. Sunday Drinking Bill by 242-70 Vote

the House District Committee leadership to prepare for killing a day of House time to put the FEPC vote off another week. But that day was used up with just one bill, to incorporate the Girl Scouts.

"Just Happened, That's All . . ."

What happened to the District Committee lineup?

"It just happened, that's all I can tell you," said District Chairman McMillan. He would not say how he voted on the Klein bill in the committee's meeting, but he voted against it yesterday.

What happened?

"I can't account for anything," Klein said. "This (House action on his bill) is one of the best arguments I know for home rule. I deplore the fact that the members of Congress bring the prejudices of their constituents to bear on District legislation, instead of acting in the interests of the District.

"This bill makes no difference to me, but the business people and the citizens of the District want it, and they should have it," said Klein.

Urges Home Rule Action

In a similar appeal to the House after the end of the District day formalities, Representative John W. Heselton (R., Mass.) urged his colleagues to sign the House petition that would bring the District home rule bill out of the House District Committee.

The bill passed the Senate last year. It was tabled by the House District Committee. A petition requiring the signatures of 218 members is pending in the House, with 170 signatures on it, to take the measure out of the District committee and present it to a House vote.

Representative Heselton told his colleagues it is always the first and last 50 signatures that are easiest to get for a discharge petition. He urged members to sign promptly.

Yesterday's House District Day was the first this year. It lasted one hour and 20 minutes.

Six Measures Passed

It took 7 minutes under McMillan's guidance to pass six District bills. All go to the Senate.

The rest of the time went into two quorum calls, and the roll call on the question of whether to consider the Klein bill.

The bills approved would:

1. Authorize the District Commissioners to contract for the removal of sludge, a by-product of the District sewage treatment plant. The measure has cleared the Senate, but now must return there for consideration of a House amendment. The Senate had voted to let the sludge removal contracts be made with or without competitive bidding."

The House, by striking out the "with or without" phrase, would make sure there is competitive bidding. A committee report on the bill said "the sludge cake accumulates at such a rapid rate that it has become necessary to store vast quantities of it on property owned by the District at Lorton, Va.

"The accumulations are so vast they constitute a nuisance."

2. Authorize the District to enter mutual aid fire protection agreements with authorities in surrounding Maryland and Virginia communities. One major result of the bill would be to give District firemen full protection in their rights to disability compensation and pensions for injuries received in runs beyond the District line. A 1947 opinion the District Corporation Counsel had raised a question about whether firemen in the District Department would have hospital and pension benefits if injured in a run outside the District.

Tighter Liquor Law

3. Authorize District officials to cancel a liquor license if its holder is convicted of a felony. Present law forbids issuance of a District liquor license to a person any time within 10 years of his conviction of a felony. But existing law leaves a loophole whereby a licenseholder, convicted of a felony during the term of the license, can still retain it until the end of the license-year.

4. Eliminate a 6-month waiting period in the proposed reduction of the District firemen's workweek from six to five days. Existing law authorizes the shorter workweek to start 180 days after funds for it are granted. The money is pending in the District budget bill for next year. The new bill would let it start as soon as the money is available.

5. Increase from $50 to $300 the legal limit on unsecured loans issued by credit unions operating under the District code.

6. Provide a $15,000 revolving fund to aid in District distribution of surplus property.

In his District Day comment to the House, Representative Heselton said there was "not a single one" of the Distrcit measures "that could not be handled just as well and no doubt much better by a municipal council elected by the good citizens of Washington."

Cites Waste of Time

"As one member of the House who has always supported economy," Heselton added, "I take this opportunity to criticize the waste of our time today and on all other District Days we have had to devote to petty local District business.

"As a matter of economy of time, I urge my colleagues to sign the home rule discharge petition. This bill would give Washington a city council that would take care of these municipal matters without wasting our time."

Hazelton said the people of Washington are "eager and able" to handle their own local affairs.

In the vote on the Klein bill, these District Committee members sided with Chairman McMillan in voting against having the House consider the measure: Representatives Oren Harris (D., Ark.), Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss), Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), Robert E. Jones, jr. (D., Ala.), James C. Davis (D., Ga.), Walter K. Granger (D., Utah), Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.), Monroe M. Redden (D., N. C.), Henry O. Talle (R., Iowa), A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), Benjamin F. James (R., Pa.), and James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.).

Voting with Klein for House consideration of the bill were Representatives Olin E. Teague (D., Tex), Paul C. Jones (D., Mo.) and James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.).

Doctor, 66, Held In Wife's Death Of Shotgun Wound

Detroit, March 13 (AP).—A doctor awaiting trial on a narcotics charge was held today for "investigation of murder" in the shotgun slaying of his wife.

He is Dr. Edward L. Brandt, 66. The victim was Mrs. Cora Brandt, 60, whom the physician married 40 years ago.

Police found Mrs. Brandt, killed by a shotgun blast in the chest; Brandt, sitting in another room holding his head in his hands. A priest, Father Elmer A. Mahoney, also was there, summoned by Brandt.

The priest said Brandt told him his mind snapped. Police said he told them: "I shot her. I don't know why."

Dr. Brandt and John A. Langton, coowners of a drug store, pleaded innocent February 14 to Federal charges of selling and filling illegal narcotics prescriptions.

Erasure Probe to Take Week or More—Barrett

The investigation of altered Third Precinct records and possible perjured testimony will take "perhaps a week or more" to complete, Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett said yesterday.

No disciplinary action has been taken against any policeman, Barrett said.

"And tomorrow and Wednesday, the answer will be the same," Barrett replied then asked whether such action was contemplated.

Meanwhile, Commissioner John Russell Young, at work for the first time yesterday after a serious cold, said he will not discuss the matter until he has a chance to examine the results of the investigation thoroughly.

Barrett is conducting an investigation to determine:

1. Who made erasures in the patrol system signal book of the Third Precinct as to the whereabouts of Capt. Anthony Richitt on January 31? The Police Department controversy was brought to a head by Richitt on March 1, when he became riled at a disciplinary transfer from command of the Third to the Eighth Precinct.

2. Who gave prejured testimony at a special session of the House District Subcommittee investigating Washington crime, called March 3 and 4 to air the controversy? The erasures indicated some persons, still unidentified, lied to the subcommittee, Barrett has said.

Still unanswered is the question of who told Emmitt Warring, reputed kingpin of local gamblers, that the crime probers were concerned about the lack of gambling arrests in the Third and Seventh Precincts.

Warring told the subcommittee he knew and, according to Richitt, said that Barrett told him on January 31. Warring referred to Barrett as "the Boss," Richitt testified.

Testimony of Warring and Richitt on this subject touched off the fireworks.

4 Policemen Suspended

Barrett said trial board action is pending on the four men. None of the four suspended would comment.

According to Wallrodt's report, a vice squad cruiser crew spotted an auto speeding northwestward across the Sousa Bridge, about 3:45 a.m., Sunday. When it was stopped, the vice squad men found Private Roy driving and Private Jefferson as passenger. Both were off duty and in civilian clothes.

Then according to Wallrodt's report, Scout Car 51 containing Gonzales and Thornton drove up, and the party proceeded to the Fifth Precinct Station, where Pvt. Metro Crenitzsky charged Roy with speeding at 50 miles per hour.

Roy

Wallrodt's report said Roy began to curse and became disorderly. Gonzales and Thorton booked him for disorderly conduct. The disorder continued, and Gonzales and Thorton took Roy to a locker room to talk to him where, Wallrodt said, the two Fifth Precinct men slapped Roy.

Wallrodt said Jefferson then began to curse and became disorderly, and also was booked on a disorderly conduct charge by Gonzales and Thorton. Wallrodt was called and suspended the four. Roy and Jefferson posted $5 collateral each on the disorderly conduct charges.

'Mob' Bandits Rob Home

news to him. He said, however, detectives would look into the matter immediately.

The call was no less bizarre than the robbery itself.

The holdup men had apparently "cased" the job well. They apparently knew Mrs. Lee would be home alone. They apparently knew where in the house to go to look for Lee's money.

One of the men, unmasked, was about 5 feet 3 inches tall. His companion, who wore a grotesque rubber Halloween mask, made to represent the head of a horse or mule, was about 6 feet tall.

Mrs. Lee was in the basement laundry of her home with her two children. There was a knock on the front door.

"I'm selling magazines," said the man who stood at the door. He was the short man. Under one arm he carried a stack of magazines.

"I'm sorry—not today," said Mrs. Lee, and she started to close the door.

The man threw his weight against the door, grabbed the young mother by the throat and forced her back into the house.

The tall, masked man, unseen by Mrs. Lee before, rushed into the house a few seconds later.

The short man held a revolver. They forced Mrs. Lee to take them to the upstairs bedroom which is occupied by Mrs. Lee and her husband.

Just after they reached the bedroom, Mrs. Lee's 9-month-old son, Blight A. Lee, left behind in the basement with his 4-year-old sister, Janet, began to cry.

Prods Child With Gun

The smaller man went to the basement. He returned a few minutes later, carrying the baby in his arms and prodding the little girl ahead of him with his revolver.

Meanwhile, the masked man held Mrs. Lee covered with a pocket knife.

"Open the bureau and dresser drawers," ordered the short man, who did most of the talking, "and give us the money. We know your husband has got a box full hidden up here."

In one of the drawers was $160, Mrs. Lee's household money. The bandits took this but either overlooked or ignored $1500 worth of United States Savings bonds which are not negotiable.

"Open this," commanded the short man, pointing to a small metal filing cabinet on top of a bureau.

Mrs. Lee was so nervous she was unable to get the key into the lock.

"We'll take this along with us," said the short man impatiently He grabbed up the cabinet, about a foot and a half long and a foot high.

Mrs. Lee later told Arlington County detectives the cabinet contained her husband's insurance policies and other private papers, but no cash.

Throughout the search, Mrs. Lee said, her nervousness was matched by that of the thugs.

Several times the short man remarked anxiously, "C'mon, let's get out of here." The taller man addressed him as "George" two or three times.

Mrs. Lee resisted when they tried to force her into the bedroom closet. The short man slapped her several times.

"We've got to lock you up somewhere," said one.

Mrs. Lee suggested the basement laundry. This satisfied the holdup men.

Mrs. Lee and the two children were locked in the laundry. They ordered her to remain silent and not to try to escape or "we'll blow your head off."

After Mrs. Lee heard the front door slam and an auto drive off, she broke the latch on the laundry door. She telephoned her sister-in-law, Mrs. Doris Satterfield, who lives nearby, at 727 South 26th st., Arlington.

Mrs. Satterfield drove to the Lee home, picked up Mrs. Lee and the children and took them to her house. Then Arlington police were notified.

While the robbery was taking place, two other children, Jack, 13, and Joan, 10, were at school.

Lee, 38, was at a tobacco and chicken farm he owns at Cheltenham, Md., in Prince Georges County. He returned home immediately when notified of the robbery by Mrs. Satterfield.

Mrs. Lee described both men as white. The tall man, she recalled, was "quite slender" and wore an overcoat.

Neither wore a necktie. Both had white shirts. The short man was of medium build, somewhere in his 30s, between 130 and 140 pounds. He had black hair, swarthy complexion and wore a "grayish tweed" overcoat.

When Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, was informed of the holdup and subsequent call, he expressed doubt these were the men wanted for a series of holdups of District gambling figures in recent months.

"We know who did the Warring job," he said.

On March 1 local police sent out 6000 circulars offering a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Sidney Stromberg, Pennsylvania underworld figure, and named him as leader of the bandit trio who pulled off the Warring job.

Barrett said he would be glad to cooperate in any way with Arlington police on the Lee robbery.

Other District gambling figures held up recently include Robert (Ryebread) Shulman, Johnny Williams and Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve.

Fresh Cabbage Juice Suggested For Peptic Ulcers

Washington, Feb. 13.—The above heading appeared in an (AP) newspaper article which reads as follows: A remarkable speedup in the healing of peptic ulcers when treated with new cabbage juice was reported today by a California scientist.

In the first test of its kind on human beings, 31 patients, some with ulcers of long standing, received the cabbage juice treatment. Each drank about a quart of juice daily. In 11 cases the ulcers disappeared in six to nine days, said the scientist. He reported the tests in California Medicine, an official journal. One case required 23 days of treatment.

The tests indicate, but do not prove, the scientis said, that raw cabbage juice contans an unidentified substance which plays "a specific role in the healing of peptic ulcers."

Pure fresh cabbage juice may be had in Washington from the Vita Food Co. at 503 12th st. nw., or 3040 14th st. nw., or at the C & O Food Store, 519 11th st. nw., CO. 2980.

Fay Asks Court to Dissolve Charters of Eleven Bottle Clubs

which "abuses, misuses, or does not use" its charter.

The Government charged the clubs were formed to violate the liquor laws, and not, as stated in their charters, for "social, patriotic and educational uplift," "mutual benefit, protection and improvement," "literary, musical, scentific purposes" or for "public welfare and recreation."

The petitions, filed one hour after normal closing time, were supported by affidavits containing the transcript of testimony given by the operator of each club before the House District Subcommittee investigating Washington crime. The committee held hearings for three days last month on after-hours clubs and took testimony from owners and managers of 15.

The petitions were prepared by Assistant United States Attorney Bruce G. Sundlun, who said he worked 10 days on the cases.

In all but one case the petitions were supported by affidavits from Lieut. Roy E. Blick, head of the police vice squad.

Eleven Clubs Listed

The clubs involved in yesterday's action are:

The Stagecrafters Club, Inc., 433 3d st. nw., Edward P. "Patsy" Meserole, 1636 Harvard st., manager.

The Atlas Club of the City of Washington, 1349 E st., nw., Garrett Francis Quinn, 5026 Danna pl., nw., president.

Turf and Grid Club, 1337 14th st., nw., Thomas A. Wiman, Richard O'Connell and Eugene Augusterfer, incorporators.

Gold Key Club, 609 E st., nw., Albert B. Glickfield, 715 Chillum rd., Hyatsville, Md., president.

United Nations Social Club, 1804 M st., nw., Thomas N. "Danny" Nickles, "owner".

Villa Bia Social Club., Inc., 2019 19th st., nw., Mrs. Ambia I. Roey, operator.

Acropolis Club, 719 9th st., nw., Steve Cleftogianis, 305 Hamilton st., nw., owner.

Stardust Whist Club, 1919 14th st. nw., William J. Edward, 12 S st. nw., former owner.

[This club allegedly is out of existence.]

Player's Guild, 5th and K sts. nw., Bernard Goldstein, 5117 3d st. nw., owner and manager.

United Family Club, 609 New Jersey ave. nw., Robert C. and Bessie Thorpe, owners.

In related action yesterday the House refused to consider a bill to extend the Saturday night drinking curfew in the District to 2 a. m., Sunday. Opponents of the bottle clubs said such an extension would force after hours clubs to close down.

None of the defendant clubs could qualify for any type liquor license, the Government charged, either because they do not fall within the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's definition of a club or because an owner or manager has been convicted of a felony.

Affidavits from Blick were attached to all the petitions except for that against the Players' Guild.

Serious Fights, Says Blick

Blick said there had been "two or three serious fights on or outside the premises" of the Stagecrafters Club, fights which led to arrests. Blick said Meserole told him "he, Meserole, knew this after-hours club couldn't last long and that he was going to make his fortune as soon as he could." Meserole has agitated for a law which would require after-hours clubs to pay $1500 for a license and $400 for a dancing permit.

The Atlas Club, Blick said in his affidavit, conducts no "activities of an educational nature," as stated in its charter. Blick said he received complaints about "gambling going on on the fourth floor," and on weekend visits some of the occupants "appeared to be under the age of 21 years."

Purpose of the Turf and Grid Club, Blick said, is not "consistent with that declared in its certificate of incorporation: 'To unite fraternally men connected with business circles and in government service . . . for benevolent, charitable, and educational purposes and for their mutual benefit, protection and improvement."

Complaint Over Bill

A recent complaint about the Turf and Grid Club, Blick said, came from persons—not members of the club—who said they had been charged $24 for "two drinks of whisky apiece, two sandwiches, and four cups of coffee." Blick also charged that between 2 a.m., and 5 a.m., he has "also observed on several occasions people delivering packages of the approximate size of bottles of liquor."

The Gold Key Club, Blick said, has "twice pleaded guilty of selling and keeping whisky without a license." Blick said he also "had knowledge of the fact that men can enter these premises (The Gold Key Club) and have a hostess supplied by Mr. Glickfield . . . for the purpose of drinking with said men at their tables during the evening."

Total Charge of $500

"In the most recent raid on the club," Blick said, "customers' bills or checks were seized, some of which indicated a total charge for one table occupied by four persons of as much as $400 or $500, without any indication what the charge was made for."

The chief purpose and activity of the United Nations Social Club, Blick said in his affidavit, "is to provide facilities for gambling, namely race horse and numbers betting." There also have been "barbudi games," a form of craps, Blick said.

"Official records show that the owner of this club, Danny Nickles," Blick's affidavit continued, "has been arrested many times, at least three times for gambling, five times for keeping and selling whisky without a license, and three times for disorderly craps (barbudi game)."

About the Villa Bia Social Club, Blick said that Mrs. Roey, "usually operates these premises for herself for periods of two to three weeks, but . . . she also occasionally sublets said premises to others, including known gamblers who have tried to run floating crap games on the premises."

Members of the vice squad have purchased drinks of liquor from the Villa Bia without being members of the alleged social club, Blick said. "The Villa Bia has been raided twice, and Mrs. Ambia Roey was convicted of selling and keeping whisky without a license as recently as January 28, 1950," Blick's affidavit said, "when she was given fines totaling $100 or 30 days in jail."

The sole purpose of the Acropolis Club, Blick said he believed "is to obtain money profits for the owner Steve Brown (Steve Cleftogianis) and to provide a place where anyone known to the owner or the management might gamble in violation of the law."

"The technique used by these people," the affidavit continued, "to evade the gambling laws is to carry the total of their wagers on slates and to settle all bets after leaving the premises."

Blick said he considered the Stardust Whist Club to be "one of the most undesirable 'dives' in the city." Edwards, the owner, Blick said, has been arrested 21 times, 10 of them for liquor violations. "This place is just a sham and subterfuge to evade the local liquor laws, and serves as a hangout for prostitutes and criminals operating in a most harmful influence on the public," Blick's affidavit said.

The Stage Door Social Club, purpose of providing a place for crap shooting and card playing in violation of the gambling laws."

The United Family Club, chartered "for public welfare and recreation," serves a different purpose, Blick charged. Blick labeled the club a "sham for evading the liquor laws and for providing a means to evade the gambling laws."

Thorpe "has threatened bodily harm to anyone who comes into his place without proper papers of authority," Blick charged. Thorpe has been "convicted as recently as October 9, 1948, for keeping and selling whisky without a license and was fined on numerous occasions for possession of lottery slips," Blick's affidavit said.

Court Upholds Convictions Of 7 Rapists

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—Convictions of seven Martinsville Negroes who were sentenced to electrocution for raping a white woman were upheld today by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Immediately after the opinion was handed down, Martin A. Martin, one of the attorneys for the condemned men, announced he was considering appeals to the United States Supreme Court.

Chief Justice Edward W. Hudgins wrote the unanimous opinion which found no reversible error in the Martinsville Circuit Court trials of the seven, who were charged in one indictment with raping Mrs. Ruby Stroud Floyd, 32, on January 8, 1949.

Mrs. Floyd was assaulted beside a railroad track while she was on her way to collect for some clothes she had sold. Only one of the Negroes was over 21 years of age at the time.

Static Assembly

Northern Virginia received rather short shrift in the 1950 session of the General Assembly just concluded in Richmond. The high-handed manner in which the Assembly overrode the effort to retain local option on rent control was a slap in the face. Perhaps the most arbitrary vote of all, however, was the denial of nonpartisan city council elections for Alexandria after the voters had specifically requested such elections in an advisory referendum. The usual arguments upholding the integrity of the two-party system fell rather flat in light of the fact that most of Virginia is the long-time captive of one party.

On the credit side the Assembly did vote a mine seizure bill for emergency use—a wise and necessary protection for the public. It approved some 45 million dollars in school aid—though the method of allocation is open to question. It provided for real estate assessments every six years, it successfully resisted a veterans' bonus, and it emerged with a balanced budget. But on many other constructive measures it remained in the grip of negativism. For example, it turned down the small pay raise for experienced teachers which would have made the program for a $2000 minimum salary more meaningful. It ignored most of the recommendations of the tax study commission; it killed the Boothe bill to end segregation in public transportation; and it voted down a new and promising effort to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting. Finally, it adopted a measure providing for an income-tax reduction if revenues exceed expenditures. With a long list of unfulfilled needs in health, mental hospitals and other areas of social legislation, it is highly doubtful whether Virginia ought to be considering the luxury of a tax reduction at this time.

HOLC Liquidation

As the Home Owners Loan Corporation approaches complete liquidation, there is good reason to offer congratulations. The HOLC is the rescue agency which undertook in the dark days of 1933 to save thousands of American families from loss of their homes through foreclosure. Foreclosures were then running at the rate of more than 1000 a day. The distress and discouragement resulting from so many domestic misfortunes of this type were a major factor in the gloom that then beset our economic life. To arrest this trend the HOLC made more than a million loans in an aggregate amount of nearly 3½ billion dollars. Everyone seemed to assume that its losses would be heavy. Now, with the HOLC 95 percent liquidated, it is clearly evident that all its stock will be retired at par. Indeed, it has a present surplus of about 10 million dollars.

Of course, this happy outcome is, in considerable measure, due to the rise in real estate prices and to the sustained high level of incomes resulting from the war. Nevertheless, it is a notable record, as President Truman pointed out last week when the HOLC repaid 26 million dollars to the Treasury. In a striking manner it vindicates the judgment of HOLC officials, members of Congress and others who resisted premature liquidation of that agency when its situation was much less favorable than it is today. Those efforts to wind up the affairs of the HOLC and turn over its mortgages to private home finance agencies were begun in 1937 and continued for a good many years. This newspaper is proud to have had a hand in fighting these moves and in supporting the HOLC's plea that it be allowed gradually to wind up its own affairs.

In 1944 an especially formidable demand for prompt liquidation of the HOLC came to a head in Congress. The United States Savings and Loan League spearheaded the drive with substantial backing in both the House and Senate. One of the schemes advanced would have turned over to private mortgage companies the sound loans made by HOLC, leaving that agency holding the bag with only questionable loans. The Washington Post said at the time: "There is every reason to believe, moreover, that, given time to liquidate its holdings in the patient, orderly fashion originally prescribed by Congress, HOLC will be able to wind up its affairs without a single penny's cost to the American taxpayer."

Had the premature liquidation scheme been accepted, the Government would have suffered substantial losses instead of the profit that is now in prospect. The good judgment in leaving HOLC free to complete its work without undue haste matches the courage and foresight that went into its original creation.

Communist Circus

There was an anticlimax at the resumption yesterday of the Tydings hearing on the McCarthy charges of communism in the State Department. Senator McCarthy had hinted over the weekend that on Monday he would implicate a "high official." But of the three names he brought out the only one who has any title to eminence is Mr. Owen Lattimore, director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at Johns Hopkins, and his eminence has nothing to do with the State Department. Mr. Lattimore, once a political adviser to Chiang Kai-shek, was retained as adviser to the Pauley mission which investigated the reparations problem of Japan. However, if the State Department had not laid toll on Mr. Lattimore's unique experience in and knowledge of conditions in extramural China, it would have been guilty, in our opinion, of egregious negligence. For Mr. Lattimore's work on Manchuria, Mongolia, and Sinkiang has been honored by learned societies on both sides of the Atlantic, and the McCarthy "revelation" coincides with the publication of his latest book, an authoritative volume on Sinkiang called Pivot of Asia.

The charge of which Mr. Lattimore is accused seems to have been membership, sometime or other, in a couple of front organizations which included in their membership, sometime or other, other well-known Americans. Here is a further challenge to the right to join or to the innocence of having joined. For the rest Mr. Lattimore is pilloried in a magazine as having been responsible for wrong decisions in the State Department on China. (When will the committee, by the way, call General Marshall and find out once and for all whether he was led by the nose on his China expedition and his China policy?) Senator McCarthy read the indictment into the committee's record. It seems to condemn Mr. Lattimore as a sort of fellow traveler of the Chinese Communists. Nobody with even a nodding acquaintance with authorities on China can ever have heard of the quoted writer. Another of the three cases also has to do with China. Mr. Haldore Hanson, formerly a correspondent for the Associated Press in China, falls under the same suspicion as Mr. Lattimore. The error of both "cases" is the same. They were right about a foregone conclusion—that Mao Tze-tung was a comer. In private business this shrewd verdict would have entitled both writers to a raise and preferment. But Senator McCarthy seems to think that these observers must have been in cahoots with the Communists to know that Chiang Kai-shek was exhausting his own "mandate from Heaven." The mere fact that they used their eyes and exercised their brains is regarded as circumstantial evidence of guilt, and Senator McCarthy passes on to the Tydings subcommittee the task of finding chapter and verse to prove it.

The atmosphere in which the Senator from Wisconsin is bringing his charges, and the cases he has proffered so far in the hearing, reek with the worst kind of politicking. What the American people think of it is difficult to assess. The troubling thought is that this sort of thing may have blunted the sense of values of many people who a while back would have risen up in their wrath against such an abuse of fair dealing. To be sure, these are not ordinary times. But, instead of calling for a promiscuous smearing of reputations, these times call for sobriety and self-discipline. Our standing in the world is suffering from the tactics employed by Senator McCarthy, our diplomacy is hamstrung, and the only beneficiary is the Soviet Union, in the textbook of whom the Senator's tactics fall under the head of "Technique of Creating Confusion in the United States."

Price Tags

This newspaper applauded the creation of Representative Martin's "price-tag" committee as an effort to inform the public of the cost of legislation on which Congress is asked to pass. With the calendars of both houses clogged with bills calling for the spending of many billions of dollars despite the huge deficit now in prospect, we feel that Congress ought to examine the ability of the Government to finance new ventures as carefully as it examines their theoretical merits. Every sincere effort to make legislators and citizens aware of the cost of welfare measures is to be applauded. But it is information and not political ammunition that is wanted. The first report of the Republican "price-tag committee" indicates, unfortunately, that its emphasis is to be on politics.

The first subcommittee report analyzes 11 bills and concludes that they have a "total cost or liability on the Federal Treasury" amounting to $9,848,385,000. Of this sum eight billion dollars are attributed to the so-called middle-income housing bill. The committee rightly says that "an estimate of the cost of this bill is difficult to ascertain." But surely it could have come closer than its eight-billion-dollar figure. This is not the cost of the bill; presumably it represents potential costs plus the total amount of Government guarantees and mortgage insurance that would be authorized by the bill. Even so, it is difficult to see how the committee gets its swollen total. While the committee makes plain that its figure covers both prospective spending and contingent liabilities, it proceeds to throw the entire sum into a total labeled "Estimated Cost or Liability on the Federal Treasury." The net result is confusion instead of enlightenment.

Incidentally, the liability the Government would incur under the bill would be cut in half by the version now before the Senate. In no event would the cost to taxpayers conceivably approach the figure cited by the committee. What legislators and citizens want are the facts as to the spending bills under consideration. This kind of reporting goes a long way toward destroying the usefulness of the "price-tag" committee. If it is to do a real job of fact-finding as to costs, apparently it will have to hire experts and let their research stand without political slanting.

Restoration In Belgium

By their votes in Sunday's plebiscite a majority of the Belgian people recorded their desire for the restoration of King Leopold III as their ruler. The margin of Leopold's victory was just above the figure of 55 percent—57 percent—that he had himself established as sine qua non; it was small enough to indicate that a serious fission of sentiment exists.

The Christian Social (Catholic) Party led the fight for the return of Leopold, and its great strength is among the Flemmings. On the eve of the referendum Cardinal van Roey, Archbishop of Malines, authorized the publication of a letter indicating his opinion that Belgian Catholics were obliged in conscience to vote for Leopold as their "legitimate King." The cardinal of course was speaking of constitutional legitimacy; but whether the result of the election can be said to testify that Leopold has "legitimacy," in the sense in which the word is employed by Ferrero in The Principles of Power—that is to say, popular acceptance—is another matter. Nor is it apparent that Cardinal van Roey's letter had any important influence on the trend of voting, since the Catholic, or Christian Social, Party was already fully committed to the King's cause.

On the other side of the argument are the Socialists, mainly Walloons. These have now threatened to call upon the workers to make a protest in the form of a general strike. What will the government do? The popular vote is purely advisory, and if the government seeks to translate the mandate into action, a parliamentary crisis is bound to be precipitated. For the Liberals may join the Socialists in forcing a dissolution. In the circumstances former Premier Spaak's counsel may get a hearing as a way out of a fratricidal dilemma. He suggests that the much-misunderstood Leopold should be restored to his throne on condition that he resign after a short and formal tenure.

There has been nothing in Leopold's attitude to suggest that he will govern otherwise than in a strictly constitutional manner. But the schism that has developed on the matter is already a threat to the precious unity of this country of two races. And every Belgian owes a prime allegiance in this time of trial to Belgium. It is a great pity to see the country torn on this relatively irrelevant issue. For Belgium has been a model for all other European countries in economic recovery on the basis of free economy and in colonial policy in the recognition of the aspirations of native populations.

Tragedy In Wales

It is too soon to do much more than conjecture about the cause of the world's worst air disaster which has killed 80 persons in Wales. The crash was particularly poignant because the plane carrying passengers returning from a holiday in Ireland plunged into the ground only a few feet short of the airport runway. Accounts so far give no reason to blame the four-motored Tudor transport—though the fact that the Tudor has been barred from scheduled passenger flights will make it a target for suspicion. The Tudor, which is the civilian version of the Lancaster bomber, seemingly has been jinxed from the beginning. It was deemed unsuitable for passenger traffic after a series of unexplained accidents, although it performed nobly on the Berlin airlift.

What seems questionable is the fact that despite a rated capacity of 44 the plane was carrying 78 passengers. This does not necessarily indicate that the craft was overloaded, since the flight from Dublin to Cardiff is a short one and not much gas was needed; nevertheless, the plane may have responded sluggishly on the landing. Moreover, the crowding in seating arrangements may have had some bearing on the number of casualties. The one consolation is that with investigation becoming a more exacting performance, it usually is possible to determine fairly precisely what causes such accidents and, with proper enforcement, to take precautions against repetition. Americans, who have had their own share of air disasters, will extend their sympathy to the bereaved Welsh people.

Soviet "Democracy"

The 99 percent vote of approval in the single-slate Russian election is another reminder of how the word "democracy" has been perverted by the Communists. A vote of "no" in the mock election of the Supreme Soviet would be tantamount to a one-way ticket to Siberia. To call this "democracy" is to render the word ludicrous. The real tragedy is that so many Russian people, many of whom have never known anything else, presumably believe that they are getting real popular rule. The manner in which the Politburo has stolen the word for its own use brings to mind Huey Long's sagacious if cynical maxim that if fascism came to America it would be called anti-fascism. Nor is the United States immune to the effects of this debasement of etymology. Not so long ago it was fashionable for certain liberal groups to use the term "Fascist" as synonymous with conservative; now the "Communist" label has been so abused as to render it utterly devoid of meaning. More and more this confusion emphasizes that one of the real aspects of the cold war is a battle of semantics.

Japanese Prisoners

While reading a Japanese newspaper dated December 7, 1949, I came across a photo, a pathetic scene of Japanese waiting year after year for the return of their loved ones from Siberia.

Aging parents and wives, clinging to the last hope that they may see their son or husband once more. The war ended—thank heaven, he will return soon—this was the year 1945. He did not return!

December 5, 1949—the last repatriation ship from Siberia. Russia promised 95,000 persons would be repatriated in 1949. Surely, he must be in this last ship.

The last of the repatriates have landed . . . but where is my son? Where is my husband? Where is my father?

The photo shows aging parents from some rural farming district who had come all the way to the port of Maizuru; then a wife of a soldier, standing alone; a wife and son; and a family . . . all weeping, facing toward Siberia. How many trips did they make? How many years have they been coming to the port?

Learning French

Your March 2 edition carries an account of a French teacher's protest against the State Department's use of an easy method of teaching languages.

Like many other Americans, I was taught French in the conventional way—learning rules of grammar, memorizing vocabulary, reciting in class on "the next 10 lines in the book." After years of such training in grade school, and more years of it in high school, I graduated unable to speak French fluently or with proper accent, unable to understand spoken French, and having only a modest ability to read and write in that language. None of my classmates did any better.

From what I hear, the Army way does better in 30 days than the conventional method can do in eight years. Under peacetime conditions, perhaps it would take a whole semester to teach French by the Army method.

What a gain it would be if traditional methods of teaching elementary French were junked and replaced by the "talkie-talk" method. Then Dr. Lind and her fellow teachers could get on to the study of French literature as literature, instead of spending years on tiresome repetition of conjugations and irregular verbs.

Teachers' Supervision

Although much has been said and written about the evils of overcrowding in schools, nothing had been said about the indignities imposed upon a person unfortunate enough to be teaching in an annex.

Teachers in our particular annex get no help along the lines of supervision and discipline. We operate as a group of individuals with no central authority to which we can turn except by telephone if we can tear ourselves away from our pupils long enough to wait until the line to the main building is open.

After having struggled single-handed with children for one or two years, we send them to the other building where many of them are treated as special problems and spend much of their time sitting in the offices of the principal and his assistant.

We are also expected to attend meetings and send in reports which we never hear about until our names are sent in for being absent or for failure to turn in a report.

These injustices could be corrected if the superintendent or one of his associates would take the time to make sure that every school building has the full-time supervision of either a principal or an assistant principal.

Pfeffer's Address

On March 6, I made an extended address in New York City at the Conference of the Committee on Federal Aid to Public Education of which a brief extract was not accurately quoted in your edition the next day. That report has, unfortunately, conveyed a misleading impression of the substance of my address which I feel it necessary to correct.

I did not charge that any clerical group was seeking domination of public education in this country. I merely warned that there was a danger that use of public funds for sectarian education might ultimately result in the disintegration of the secular public school system into a system of publicly supported sectarian institutions as exists in the Province of Quebec, Canada.

Bishops' Funds

The plight of many thousands of people still homeless and suffering unbelievable privation in Europe and the Far East is a direct challenge to all freedom-loving Americans.

One organization which never ceased to befriend the victims of war since 1943 is War Relief Services—National Catholic Welfare Conference. The homeless, the aged, the sick and little children, are their special care and in their behalf they have distributed to date more than 303 million pounds of foodstuffs, medicines and clothing valued at over 129 million dollars. War Relief Services operates without discrimination of any sort.

But to carry on in 1950, War Relief Services and its companion agency, the Bishops' Emergency Relief Committee, both sponsored by the Catholic Bishops of America, needs the continued support of generous and interested friends. This year the annual Bishops' Fund campaign for the victims of war will be held from March 12 to March 19. The goal is five million dollars; the purpose: to continue world-wide relief and rehabilitation.

Your donation, made to the Bishops' Fund campaign at any Catholic church will go straight to the neediest, the hungry and the homeless overseas.

Child Day Care Board

The great need of the day is the provision of permanent child day care centers. These centers provide adequate care of and wholesome environment for each and every child, irrespective of color or creed. The centers give working mothers all this, plus a financial margin which enables one to live.

The thought occurs to me that if we had a board of child day care, and gave more conscientious thought to the care of our children (on a Nation-wide scale), eventually there would be less work for the parole boards.

Belasco Theater

In your issue of March 8 Mr. Jess Larsen, who has charge of such matters, is quoted as saying that the attempt to wrest the Belasco Theater from the Government will not work out because neon lights and crowds will injure the neighborhood of the White House.

At last we have a reason for bureaucratic indifference to the need of the people in this city for a legitimate theater. Does this ridiculous excuse hide some political maneuver? Is it possible that the Southern politicians in Congress are opposing the leasing of the theater for non-segregated audiences?

It seems to some of us that no better setting for a theater can be found than Lafayette Square. The trees and the walks, the White House lawn and the old-fashioned houses of Jackson pl. all inspire a person to wish to attend the theater. At least that is what the builders of the Belasco thought. But beauty and bureaucracy do not mix.

Freedom To Join

Because a person goes to one or two Communist meetings doesn't make him un-American. If his name continues to appear on these lists that is something else again.

I once attended a meeting at which a woman talked who claimed to be an honorary member of the Chetniks, a Balkan group. She talked me out of 50 cents. She said, "The Chetniks are the most democratic of all foreign groups, very like Americans. Should anyone betray a Chetnik he takes the matter into his own hands." And she patted the long, sharp (double-edged) knife she had fastened to her belt.

To this day I do not know whether I gave 50 cents to help a Communist group, a Fascist group, or just a plain gang of rascals. However, I will not admit to being un-American. As long as we allow freedom of speech we will necessarily allow freedom of listening. And anyone with natural American curiosity will be bound to listen to the wrong fellow sometime.

Accident Pictures

As a former resident of Washington who considers The Washington Post one of the outstanding metropolitan dailies of the country by virtue of its forthright treatment of issues significant to enlightened citizenship both local and national, I find cause for concern at occasional evidence in your paper of that disregard for taste and that exploitation of the sensational which is the stock-in-trade of the tabloid press. The picture in your March 6 issue representing Dr. James Burns administering emergency treatment to Jack Mills at the scene of an automobile accident is a case in point. At least this picture was discreetly placed on an inside page. But Mrs. Barbara Parks fared less well when you spread her tearful face across the front page of your February 21 issue for all the world to witness her abjection. And I recall the shocking portrayal some time since of the crumpled form of a man lying where he had been struck by a Capital Transit streetcar, the object of the curious stares of passersby, until an ambulance should remove him.

Admittedly the last case cited might have some justification if the point was to demonstrate the delinquency of the emergency ambulance service in such instances. But the other cases strike me as pure sensationalism, unworthy of the standards maintained otherwise by The Washington Post.

Chipping Away At Freedom

By Marquis Childs

Cost Of Fear

IN ENGLAND, in some of the older mines, they still use pit ponies to haul the cars from the mining face where the men are digging to the shaft where the cars are carried up to the surface. Those ponies stay down below for months or even years, leading a subterranean life that is apparently not too unhealthy.

Visiting one of these older mines some years ago, I was told that when the pit ponies are taken up for a bit of sun and grass, they resist strenuously this radical innovation. Then, after they've had a few hours of freedom and a little sunlight, it takes a half dozen men to subdue each rebel and get it down into the mine again.

That's just about the way I'm feeling at this moment. I sat on the Florida shore for a few days in the brilliant sun. I did practically nothing but watch the breakers roll in, content to wait for that moment of shattering beauty when the wave breaks into crystal and the white shards of foam roll up on the beach.

I can feel the murk of Washington closing in around me and I'm kicking and fighting as we descend the mine shaft. I know that in time I'll be perfectly accustomed again to the dim light of this other world. It will probably come to seem the normal thing once more.

Maybe it's because I've had a brief time in another kind of light that the encircling gloom appears to be deeper in hue than even in the immediate past. It hangs like a solid substance over this quarrelsome capital.

AS THOUGH to escape it, the President has gone off to Florida and I hope he gets all possible benefit from his brief excursion out of the mine shaft and into the sun. But he has one handicap, it seems to me, and that is that to a considerable degree he carries his own atmosphere about with him.

One of the remarkable things about the Truman Administration is how few new people have come into it. The circle of cronies has remained the same. If anything, it has grown smaller with bolder men such as Clark Clifford dropping out.

The old familiars travel with the President. They are the atmosphere, and an ever narrowing one. In that atmosphere it is increasingly difficult to intrude a new idea or a new viewpoint.

Except for the inadequate and stale speech on Washington's Birthday, the President has maintained a determined silence through the controversy on the hydrogen bomb and the mounting war scare that appears to be giving most people a new case of the shakes. Soviet Russia has in the meantime been conducting a powerful peace offensive. We can be sure how little reality there is in that offensive and yet, for millions upon millions who feel dread and insecurity in the face of a new threat, it will have persuasive power. It may persuade the doubting that Russia's protestations on the subject of peace are real and honest.

BUT AN even deeper shadow, in my opinion, hangs over the intentions of those who seem bent on destroying our freedoms here at home. Whether that is their goal or not, this is likely to be the end result. If enough pieces are chipped away little by little, we shall discover one day that the base itself has been destroyed.

Representative Howard Smith of Virginia succeeded in tacking onto the National Science Foundation bill an amendment which would give the FBI the authority of a gestapo and destroy a large area of academic freedom and the right of free inquiry. Senator Karl Mundt of South Dakota is pressing hard for the Mundt-Nixon bill, which would put a strait-jacket around an undetermined segment of political freedom.

These men and others like them seem to distrust freedom. They seem to distrust the democratic process itself. They behave as though they were motivated by panic fear. I'm sure that they believe righteously that they are saving the Nation from terrible dangers. But whether they know it or not, the end they are driving toward is a stockade in which just about all the American people would finally be confined.

Among left-wing intellectuals, particularly those who flirted with communism, it is fashionable to say that all is over and America is already a police state. This is, of course, just as silly as the cries from the panic-stricken who believe that anyone slightly to the left of Louis XIV is a dangerous Communist.

While they've been chipped away somewhat, we still have our freedoms. But I feel very deeply that if we go on taking them so lightly for granted and permitting the chipping process to continue, we shall not have them for long. The great heritage out of the American past can be destroyed by frightened and mistrustful men of small and warped minds. In my opinion it must be the conscious responsibility of every American citizen today to defend those rights.

Movie Tax

I note with interest the March 8 letter of John L. James regarding the elimination of the tax of the movie houses.

After the First World War, I was living in Charleston, W. Va. The first run theaters had 36 cents admission and 4 cents tax; 10 percent was the excise tax.

When the tax was removed they still charged 40 cents. I shall not write to my Congressman.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Defeatism In Washington

SEEN from the Arizona desert, and some points in between, the picture of Washington at the moment does not make much if any sense.

Lippmann

FOR EACH day there are two series of news stories which recur, as Chesterton once said, with all the monotony of roses in wall paper pattern. One series comes from Capitol Hill telling how some Republican Senator has warned the country not to trust the State Department and Mr. Acheson: the Senator is going to prove that they are the dupes of the Communists. The other series comes from the State Department warning the people that they would be the dupes of the Communists if they were so stupidly innocent as to feel "that somehow or other there was an answer to our problem if only we were smart enough to figure it out."

THERE MUST be a better way to run a government, which is supposed to be leading the free peoples of the world, than to announce daily that the Senate does not trust the Secretary of State and that the Secretary of State is afraid the people cannot be trusted. The Republican Senators have got Mr. Acheson in a squeeze where he appears to be spending half his time denying that he is a friend of the Communists and the other half figuring out ways to show how much he dislikes and distrusts the Communists.

And although he has now talked himself into a position which makes Winston Churchill an appeaser and a misguided idealist by comparison, the Secretary of State is treated on Capitol Hill with less courtesy and with smaller regard for the rules of evidence than if he were a convicted horse thief.

IN THIS atmosphere of total distrust it is idle to talk about "total diplomacy." There can be nothing total about the actions of a government which is a house so divided within itself. And of diplomacy there can be virtually none when the Secretary of State feels he must distrust the instinct of the people instead of clarifying, guiding, and rationalizing it.

"We clearly are not focusing" he said the other day, "our total resources on the winning of that struggle." Clearly we are not focusing our total resources, including our resources of brain power and of heart. Why not? Because we have not been given any objective on which to focus. The people and the Congress have supported every measure of any importance which the Administration has recommended: the Truman Doctrine, the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Security Pact, the military aid program, the annual military appropriations, the unification bill, the United Nations, the World Bank, the Monetary Fund, and all the rest. They cannot be expected to focus more resources than their responsible leaders ask them to focus. If the Administration thinks that more is needed, then it should say what it is that is needed, and why.

BUT IN FACT what we see is that Mr. Acheson has nothing new to propose to the Russians and that he has nothing new to propose to the American people and to our allies. Thus the diplomatic situation is frozen in Washington while the actual situation in Europe and Asia is deteriorating. The State Department has for the time being run out of ideas which evoke energy, offer hope, and create confidence.

This sterility and defeatism is understandable in view of the persecution—that is the right name for it—being carried on by the Republican Senators. But it is also true that the persecution goes on, and will go on and on, because the Administration has not had for over a year a single new, interesting, and constructive idea to which the Nation could rally.

YET THE events of the past year have been momentous. In China, in Japan, in South Asia, in Germany and central Europe, in the race of armaments the situation today is radically different from what it was believed to be a year ago. But except that we have announced our intention to make the hydrogen bomb, our official doctrines and our policies are just what they were.

We are still operating the Marshall Plan on the assumption that western Europe can be "integrated" without a solution in respect to eastern Germany and eastern Europe and the sterling area. We are still operating the North Atlantic Pact and military aid without any public recognition of the new insecurity of Germany, Austria, and Scandinavia after the Soviet achievement of the atomic bomb. We have renounced Chiang and we are still thoroughly entangled with Chiang. No wonder that the American people, and even more poignantly the people abroad, feel that somebody ought to try to be smart enough to figure out some answers to their problems. They do not like to be told that it would be foolish to try.

AND IN FACT they will try. If Washington won't try, then Paris, London, Bonn, Delhi, Tokyo, and the rest will try. For what is happening as a consequence of the freeze-up in Washington is that the leadership we had by virtue of our ideas and our power is rapidly disintegrating. We are losing touch with the peoples of the world—with their fears, their hopes, their needs, their purposes, and their will to survive—and we are talking not to them but to ourselves in a self-induced mood of defeatism and impotence about how much we must distrust one another and our own better instincts and our own capacity to think and to believe.

Mining Aid Bill Is Taken From Committee

By the United Press

The House by-passed its Rules Committee yesterday and began debating a bill to provide up to 80 million dollars a year in Federal funds to aid mine exploration and conservation.

The measure, already passed by the Senate, probably will come to a vote in a day or two.

It was cleared for floor action by a voice vote, which allows two hours debate. The Public Lands Committee brought it up under special procedure after the Rules group had refused to send it to the floor.

As passed by the Senate, the bill would authorize subsidies for mining exploration or for conservation measures to keep going mines in production. It would be administered by the Interior Department.

Congress approved an outright subsidy measure two years ago, but President Truman vetoed it.

In the predebate skirmishing yesterday several members of the Rules Committee attacked the bill.

Representatve Christian Herter (R., Mass.) said it was "loosely drawn," and claimed it was not necessary for national security. Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) said the measure was "sold to the majority" as a boon to Western States.

Dutch Troops to Stay Longer in Indonesia

Jakarta, United States of Indonesia, March 13 (AP).—The Netherlands today delayed by three months, its target date for pulling Dutch troops out of Indonesia, giving "technical difficulties" as the reason.

Dutch War Secretary Fockema Andrea told reporters most Dutch troops will be out of Indonesia by the end of September. The evacuation is going along well, he said, with some 10,000 soldiers being moved out each month. The total to be evacuated, he said, is about 70,000.

Legal Hiring Halls Urged For Seamen

By The Associated Press

Congress was urged yesterday to legalize hiring halls in the maritime industry.

Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (CIO), told a Senate Labor subcommittee on labor-management relations that "there is no better way of stabilizing labor in the maritime industry than through rotary hiring halls policed by the union seamen themselves."

The Supreme Court has held in effect that hiring halls are illegal under the closed-shop ban in the Taft-Hartley Act. The court refused to review the decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals that held the hiring hall system illegal.

"I'm trying now to get something done that will not throw the industry back in the hands of Communists," Curran declared.

He had been asked by Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) if employers can reject and the union can expel seamen believed to be Communists. Curren said that under present law and under the union contract that is not legal.

Curran said the hiring hall system provides more competent employes and a better type of men than earlier hiring methods.

Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.), who heads a maritime subcommittee of the Commerce Committee, told the hearing that both ship owners and seamen concede that the hiring hall system has worked out to the advantage of both.

"Today labor-management relations in this industry are better than at any time I recall," Magnuson said. "The outlawing of preferential hiring through the union hiring hall has created a condition which threatens to disrupt these good relations."

Magnuson urged early action on his bill to exempt from the Taft-Hartley Act the hiring hall practices in the industry.

Steel Report Hit as 'Slanted' By Crucible Company's Head

Pittsburgh, March 13 (UP). — A steel executive today criticized the report of a congressional committee investigating the steel industry as being "about as slanted as a thing could be."

William H. Colvin, president of Crucible Steel Co., charged that the Joint Economic Committee, headed by Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, conducted a biased inquiry into the industry's wage-price setup.

"The committee was not seeking information in those hearings," Colvin said. "It was seeking, most of its members at least, confirmation for their preconceived notions."

The committee suggested a study be made to determine whether the industry had taken on the aspects of a public utility, according to the reports.

Colvin disclosed the text of a letter he sent O'Mahoney calling on the committee to find the causes for ill health in the industry.

"You should be entitled to know," the letter said, "if it is attributed to inefficient, weak and indifferent management, whether it is a victim of the power of a labor monopoly or if it is subjected to laws, regulations or such political interference as eventually to reduce it to the chattel status of the railroads today."

Colvin pointed out that "some force, somewhere is driving the industry toward elimination and concentration."

"If conditions exist and persist which makes survival for many units impossible," he said, "no law you can pass can prevent elimination and therefore concentration."

Why some men are label conscious

All men buy cars by the brand name. That is the way they purchase cigars and cigarettes. Strangely enough, only the clothes-wise few select clothes with a specific label.

The name is just as important on clothes as it is on cars, television sets — or anything else. So when a man asks for a "Lebow" Suit, he has learned that the label gives him fine material, meticulous tailoring and the latest in smartness and style. More than that, he is sure of value for his money.

Lewis Cass, Governor of Michigan Territory . . .

. . . Used the old fashioned "f" for double "s" in signing this check on Corcoran & Riggs in 1853 while serving his state in the Senate.

One of the most neglected "giants" of early American history, Cass was, successively, Brigadier-General in the War of 1812, Governor of Michigan Territory for eighteen years, Secretary of War under Jackson, Minister to France, Democratic Presidential Candidate in 1848, and Secretary of State under Buchanan.

This redoubtable RIGGS customer was the first white man to cover the Indian trail from Detroit to Chicago . . . traversing enroute a wild, unsettled region that has since become the industrial heartland of America.

From pioneer days to the present, the RIGGS banking tradition has kept pace with the economic growth of the Nation . . . serving as the Washington depository of banks and businesses located in all sections of the Country.

Cass traveled by canoe on most of his early trips of exploration or treaty-making.

Pepco Sales Mount 140% In 10 Years

By S. Oliver Goodman

New records were set in 1949 by Potomac Electric Power Co. in sales, number of customers and revenues.

In the annual report to stockholders, President Alfred G. Neal said that sales of 2,095,954,530 kilowatt hours last year were 4:49 percent more than in the previous year. The total represented a gain of 140 percent in the past decade, he added.

In those 10 years the average annual gain has been 9.32 percent. The lesser rate of increase in 1949 apparently was due to a 14 percent drop in use of electricity by Capital Transit Co. All other categories showed upturns.

As previously reported, Pepco netted $4,079,188 in 1949 after operating costs, interest charges and preferred dividends. This was equal to $1.15 a share on the 3,553,500 shares outstanding at the end of the year. In 1948, the net of $3,411,901 was also equal to $1.15 a share on the 2,961,150 shares then outstanding. The annual dividend rate of 90 cents a share was amply covered in both years.

Neal said that one of the most striking features of the year was the additional amount of capital invested. Construction expenditures last year totaled $23,621,163, an increase of nearly 53 percent over 1948.

The rated capacity of Pepco's generating facilities was increased during 1949 to 585,000 kilowatts as a result of the completion of the first 80,000-kilowatt turbo-generator unit at the new Potomac River power plant at Alexandria. This will be further increased by summer, when the second 80,000-kilowatt turbo-generator unit will be completed.

Neal also pointed out that number of customers set a new peak of 264,235, a gain of 9,305. Operating revenues of $35,644,054 also were at a new high, a gain of 11.46 percent over the previous year. About half of this upturn was attributed to higher electric rates and most of the remainder came from increased sales.

FURNITURE: Retail furniture sales in Washington showed a 9 percent increase in January over the same 1949 month, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. The report covered seven local stores. In the same month, 62 furniture stores in the Fifth District displayed a 8 percent sales increase.

SAVINGS: If the banks are to maintain their leadership in the thrift field, it will be necessary to do a better merchandising job, more than 1000 bankers were told at a meeting yesterday of the savings and mortgage division of the American Bankers Association in New York. Said J. R. Dunkerly, deputy manager and secretary of the ABA division: "Many (banks) do not seem to realize that in a highly competitive field such as this (savings) one, it is necessary to exert considerable effort and to expend sizable sums in advertising and promoting the business."

NEW OFFICE. Celebrating the opening of a Washington office, the A. O. Smith Corp. of Milwaukee yesterday held a reception for 250 Government and business representatives in the Carlton Hotel. The new office, in the Mayflower Building, will be under the management of Shelby S. Walker, formerly in charge of the steel fabricating firm's Philadelphia branch.

ODD LOTS: The Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday withdrew all fixed-price quotations for the sale of its tin, pinning its price directly to that in the open market . . . One of the bigger independent auto makers late this month will announce a new line of cars priced $23 to $50 lower than comparable Plymouth and Ford models and only $60 higher than a Chevrolet special, according to the publication Automotive News . . . Steel industry this week has scheduled operations at 89.8 percent of capacity, a sharp rally from last year's 73.5.

PROGRESS: The Prudential Insurance Co. of America reported $31,304,000,000 of life insurance in force at the 1949 year-end, an increase of $1,669,000,000 over 1948. Insurance sales last year totaled $3,153,000,000, President Carroll M. Sharks told the Prudential's annual business conference in Newark. The report listed Prudential's assets at the close of the year at $8,325,414,772, compared with $7,846,101,629 a year earlier.

EARNINGS: American Sugar Refining Co. reported net income of $7,950,504 or $10.75 a share for 1949, compared with $7,648,360 or $10.07 in 1948. Other earnings statements:

2 Men Held In Connection With 2 Deaths

Two men were ordered held for action of the grand jury at coroner's inquests in separate death cases yesterday.

The first was Aaron A. King, 54, of 259 Warren st. ne. Police early Sunday found his wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth King, 36, unconscious and badly bruised in their home.

An autopsy showed that Mrs. King died of a brain concussion. After the inquest, King was charged with murder on police books.

The second man held was David Rogers, 27, of 7 New York ave. nw. He was arrested after the stabbing early Saturday morning of Charles Linton, 27, of 1637 Vermont ave. nw.

Police said Linton was stabbed at a party in the 600 block of T st. nw., and staggered out to a corner. Passersby took him to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died.

Thelma, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Slater, 4613 Hilltop ter. se., will receive a medal for bravery in rescuing her 9-year-old sister, Jenny, from drowning in the Anacostia River. In Assault Case

Battling Stebbinses Back in Court

Mrs. Stebbins, 49, said Mr. Stebbins, 75, swung a chair at her, threatened her and tore her dress and Mr. Stebbins said Mrs. Stebbins called him a "uncivilized dog, snake, skunk and rat," all of which Mr. Stebbins allowed was "hard to take."

And that was the way it went yesterday before Municipal Judge George D. Neilson and a jury. Samuel A. Stebbins, white-haired and his hearing failing, is charged with simple assault and threats against his spouse.

Federal Judge Jennings Bailey last January kept the Stebbinses within swinging reach of each other when he denied a divorce to Stebbins. The couple lives in the home owned by Stebbins at 5426 MacArthur blvd. nw.

The case will go to the jury today

Kane Death in Fire Ruled Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, in the death of Leo Kane, 47, of 814 26th st. nw.

He was found dead in his room when fire consumed his bed there about 11 p. m. Sunday and spread to the interior of the room. Dr. MacDonald said he died of burns and asphyxiation. He said he was informed that a cigarette was probably cause of the blaze.

'Sleep Show' Set April 8 to May 6

Dates for the third annual "Sleep Show" here will be April 24 to May 6, it was decided last night at a dinner meeting of bedding manufacturers and dealers at Hotel Continental.

The show will start April 17 in other parts of the country, but is being moved up here so as not to conflict with the local Carpet Show.

Clerk Found Shot to Death After Telephoning to Friend

An unemployed clerk, who suddenly broke off a telephone conversation yesterday with his apartment mate, was found shot to death in the apartment a few moments later.

He was identified as Joseph W. A. Haynes, 32, of 1760 Euclid st. nw. The mate was Albert Thomas, who is employed at a camera shop at 939 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Mrs. Margaret Gouldthorpe, apartment manager, told police Haynes asked her to call Thomas. The connection was up for a short time, she said, when Thomas called on another line and asked her to go to investigate Haynes' apartment. She said she found Haynes in the bathroom, a bullet wound in his left chest.

An Emergency Hospital physician pronounced him dead at the scene.

Thomas said Haynes talked about repairs to Haynes' car, remarked that they were too expensive, and then threw down the phone receiver.

Police were informed Haynes had worked for about 6 weeks early in 1949 as a cashier and paymaster at the Carlton Hotel here, and had not been employed since. He had previously clerked in a camera shop, they were told.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Police said they found two notes, one written to a sister in Somerville, Mass., and another to a friend whose identity was not disclosed. The notes indicated according to police, that Haynes had contemplated his action for some time, that he was in financial difficulties and debt, and saw no way of getting out. Police said they also found three sealed but unmailed letters. Contents were not disclosed.

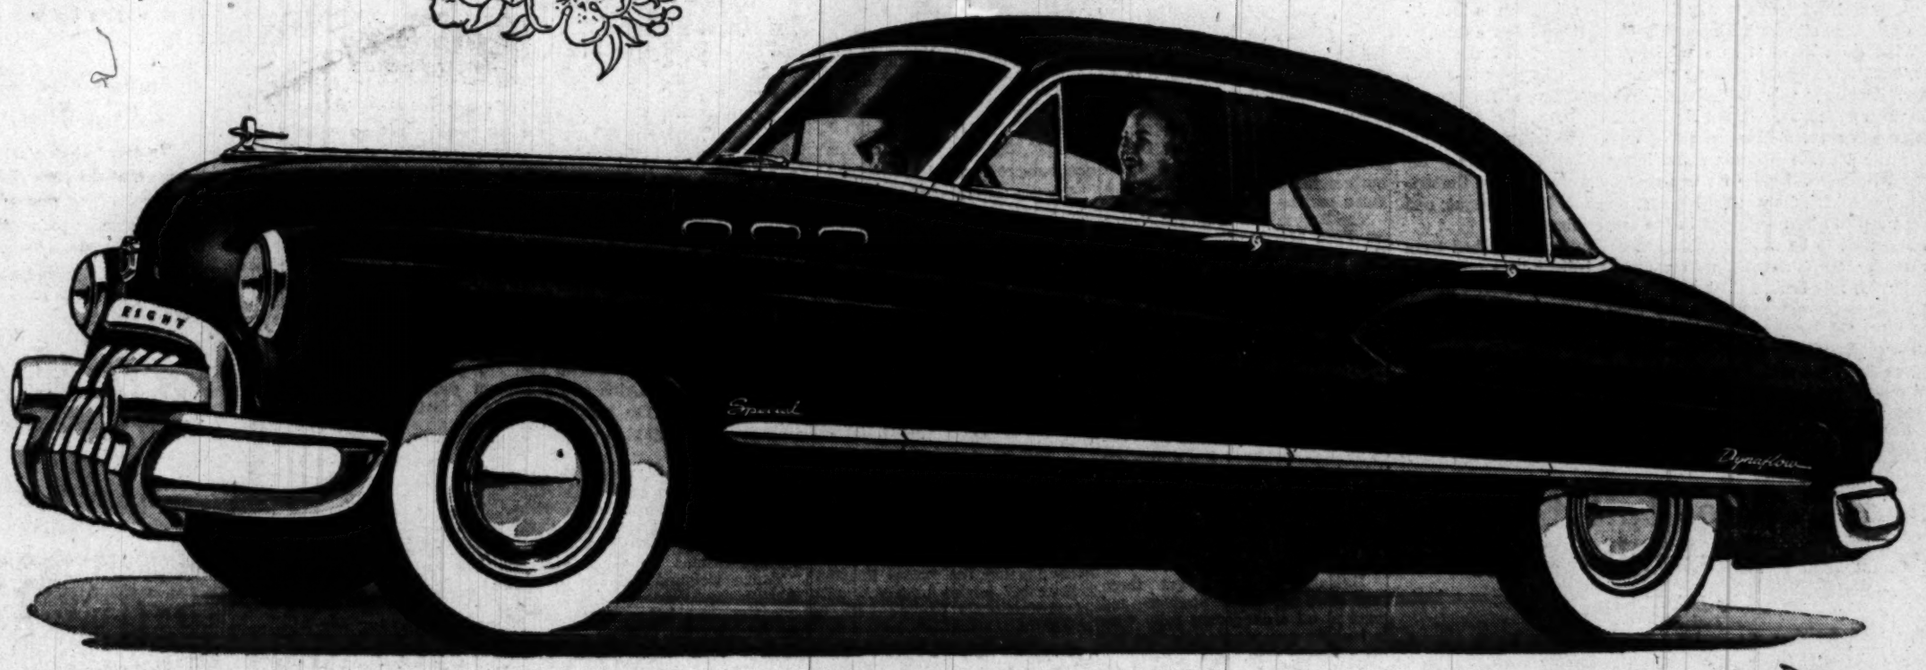
NOW IT'S YOUR TURN TO BLOSSOM OUT



You've seen it happen with the family down the street, the friends across town, the folks you went to school with.

They started out, as most folks do, with a car of modest size — and still more modest price.

Maybe they moved themselves up a bit, step by step, to the top-bracket models in that particular price range.

Then they discovered something.

It doesn't cost much more — sometimes no more — to really blossom out in a Buick.

It's not such a long stretch to take command of a great-hearted valve-in-head straight-eight — to move into the room and restfulness and steady going of a Buick—to cloak yourself in styling that's today's height of highway fashions.

You can know the good, satisfying feel of a Buick wheel in your hand — you can have the gentleness of soft coil springs on all four wheels — you can revel in the handiness of cars that are big in room and big in repute, yet traffic-sized and easy to park and put away.

Maybe — who knows till you inquire? — you can manage the magic silkiness of Dynaflow Drive* in all its 1950 perfection—of a certainty you'll find the model that's twin to your heart's desire among the many choices Buick gives you for 1950.

So why not make this your year to blossom out in a Buick, as so many have before you? Why not find out the dollars-and-cents story of Buick — it even includes some very happy figures on gas economy — from your own Buick dealer?

See him now, will you — and help yourself to some real fun this season!

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

BUICK ALONE HAS Dynaflow

AND WITH IT GOES: HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines, five hp ratings. This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 13.—The baseball branch of the duPonts, the Phillies, has come a long way since 1943 when R. R. M. Carpenter, sr., dipped into its change purse and bought the franchise for his son, Bob. The munitions-cellanese-nylon empire, at least that segment of it owned by the Carpenters, is now solidly in the baseball business.

POVICH

Young Bob thinks he has assembled a time-bomb due to explode any year now and project the Phillies on top of the National League. Last season was a preliminary test, and the Phillies zoomed from seventh place into third in the league finish, the finest display by that entry since 1917.

When he took the franchise over from Bill Cox, who was cashiered out of baseball by the late Judge Landis on reports there had been betting on games, young Carpenter found himself with an eighth-place ball club, "and one minor league player, at Trenton."

Their only minor league holdings was a turkey-necked first baseman with a prize Adam's apple who was fittingly known as Turkey Thompson. The Phillies now have 400 ball players under contract.

THEY'VE spent four times the cost of the franchise to assemble 13 minor league farm teams, Carpenter relates, "and more than a million dollars to sign free agents." The Phillies drew 840,000 fans last year "and almost made money." The profits will start any season now, says the DuPont scion, reared in the profit motif.

What Carpenter likes about his club, aside from its third-place finish last year and its high prospect of doing better, is its age. "The infield averages only 24 years, even with the two first basemen, Dick Sisler and Ed Waitkus, crowding 30," he says. "In the outfield, Ashburn is 23, Del Ennis 25, Bill Nicholson is 35, but we have a dozen other kids on the way up."

His top young pitcher, Robin Roberts, and Curt Simmons will be 21, pretty soon. Charley Bicknell is 21, and the "veteran" Russ Meyer is 27. "We don't figure to have any cardiac cases for a few years" says young Carpenter. "It's a pretty good bulwark against any rapid deterioration. The direction we can expect to go is up. One more top pitcher, and maybe we can take it all."

IT was young Carpenter who plucked the biology professor, Eddie Sawyer, to manage the club a couple of years ago after Ben Chapman sort of displeased him. The fact that Sawyer had never made the big leagues as a player did not displease Carpenter, who theorizes:

"Maybe it's better that your manager was not a big league star; then he can get a clear viewpoint about what they ought to do, in his own image. Too many managers who were stars think of ball players in terms of what they would do themselves, and don't have the patience that is required of a manager."

With the exception of the first baseman, Sawyer brought along virtually a home-bred infield when he departed the Phils' farm team at Utica to move up to the main office. Shortstop Gran Hamner, Second-Baseman Mike Goliat and Third Baseman Puddinhead Jones all played for him in Utica, all bore his stamp of approval. Before that, Sawyer had fascinated young Carpenter somewhat by recommending another player named Ritchie Ashburn.

AT Utica, Ashburn came to Sawyer as a catcher. There were repeated inquiries as to why Sawyer was using him in the outfield when the Phils were desperately trying to develop a catcher. "This kid can't make it as a catcher," Sawyer wired the main office, "but leave him here for a year and he'll be your best outfielder." One year later, Outfielder Ashburn of the Phils was voted the Rookie of the Year in the National League.

There was some flabbergast a few weeks ago when Sawyer announced that Eddie Waitkus would have to battle Dick Sisler for the first base job. Before he was shot by a fool girl in Chicago last summer, Waitkus was the top first baseman in the league, and Sisler wasn't to be mentioned in the same inhalation.

It appeared to be shoddy treatment of Waitkus, who had been in Florida since November with a special trainer in a try at recovering his full health. The trainer pronounced Waitkus fit. It was believed he would move easily back into the first base job. Why, then, did Sawyer cast public doubt on it?

He explained that today. "The last thing I wanted to make Waitkus feel," he said, "was that he was an object of sympathy or pity after getting shot up. I'd rather have him get the job back by winning it, and so would he."

Hoyas Try Football Again And They Miss Billy Conn

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

One thing's for sure, Georgetown U. will have to try to con nine formidable football foes next season with one "n."

Fifty-odd Hoyas officially began spring practice yesterday but the missing Billy Conn provided most of the conversation.

Conn, one of the East's top breakaway backs who provided 75 percent of Georgetown's running attack the past two years, flunked out of school last month.

Surveying the halfback spot, it's easy to see why Coach Bob Margarita's so glum. Actually, he has a total of two who have seen much varsity service—Dick Barba, who never has realized his potential, and Warren McFague, a soph who played mainly on defense.

If it weren't for such upcoming prospects as Bob (Bugs) Thompson and Jack O'Mahoney, the situation would be altogether intolerable. Thompson, a D. C. standout at McKinley Tech, enrolled at Georgetown last fall after being dissatisfied at Clemson.

O'Mahoney is a 175-pounder up from the freshman team. Jack played at Pittsburgh's North Catholic High School and considered something like 30 college scholarships before coming to Georgetown. In one season he scored nine touchdowns, one on a 99-yard run.

Margarita figured that Conn's senior year would have been his best with Thompson and O'Mahoney on hand to lend a hand. Now they have to come through without Billy if Georgetown is to put even a slight dent in its rugged schedule.

With 18 lettermen back, Georgetown opens at Penn State September 30 then tackles Tulsa, Villanova, Maryland, Boston College, Miami (Fla.), Holy Cross, Fordham and George Washington.

Margarita, 29-year-old mentor starting his second season on the Hilltop, said he felt like he was starting all over again. Quick to pick up the finer talking points, Margarita preferred to discuss his weaknesses. Truth is, though, he doesn't have to exaggerate.

Bob Keller and Tom Burde are the only experienced centers and both were used on defense last year. Up from the frosh is Jim Slowey, 220-pound Scranton Tech product.

Walcott Stops Johnny Shkor In First Round

Philadelphia, March 13 (AP).—Jersey Joe Walcott, the 36-year-old Camden, N. J., heavyweight, who never seems to get old, knocked out Baltimore's Johnny Shkor in 1:34 of the first round tonight at the Arena. Walcott weighed 197 and Shkor 216 for the scheduled 10 rounder.

At the court of six, Shkor started to rise but pitched forward on his face as the 3541 fans who paid $9936 were confounded with the suddenness of the finish. Shkor finally staggered to his feet and after a quick examination by the ring doctor left the ring under his own steam.

Bagby Quits Baseball

Atlanta, March 13 (AP).—Jim Bagby, sr., a veteran of almost 10 years pitching in the big leagues and recently released by the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association, said today he is retiring from baseball.

Red Sox Win From Yanks In 12th on Williams' Hit

Sarasota, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Ted Williams' second double and third hit of the day helped the Boston Red Sox defeat the New York Yankees with a two-run rally in the last half of the twelfth inning today, 7-6. A crowd of 4196, largest in Sarasota history, saw the game.

Williams smashed his towering double to left, scoring Dom DiMaggio who had drawn a walk from Wally Hood. After Williams gave way to pinch-runner, Tommy O'Brien, Al Zarilla dribbled a single over second to break up the game.

Williams had tied the game in the tenth inning with his first two-bagger off Hood, fifth Yankee pitcher on the mound.

Tigers Score First Victory, Beating Reds

Lakeland, Fla., March 13 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers slammed out 15 hits today as they beat the Cincinnati Reds, 10-8, for their first victory in three starts in the Grapefruit League.

The Tigers surged into a 9-3 lead as they batted around in a five-run, six-hit outburst in the sixth inning off Frank Fanovich.

Tiger Outfielder Vic Wertz strained a groin muscle in pregame practice and was benched in favor of Pat Mullin. Wertz will not play against the Yankees at St. Petersburg tomorrow, but may be ready to play Thursday.

Griffs Blow 4-to-1 Lead, But Spurt in 8th to Win

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 13.—Apparently there was nothing wrong with the Nats that the Phillies couldn't cure. The Phils moved into Tinker Field today from Clearwater and punctured that two-game losing streak of the Washington club by blowing an eight-inning lead and taking a 7-5 beating.

This was the Nats' finest day in the young grapefruit league season. Despite a wild display by Rookie Diz Sutherland who dished up four runs to the Phils in the sixth inning, the Nats' pitching showed an over-all improvement. Two of the reasons were Ray Scarborough and young Dick Welteroth.

It was looking black for the Nats, though, as late as the eighth inning with the advantage of home runs by Eddie Yost and Gil Coan having been wiped out by the Phils' surge against Sutherland in the sixth. Blix Donnelly took a 5-4 lead into the eighth.

At that point, Bucky Harris' infield started busting out all over with batting power. Sam Dente immediately put the tying run on base with a single to right, and when the tiring Donnelly walked Noren, Manager Eddie Sawyer rushed Ken Trinkle, the former Giant, to the mound.

Trinkle started out bravely, getting Eddie Robinson on an infield pop and Sam Mele on a modest fly ball, but that success was merely a snare and delusion. Eddie Yost promptly bumped Trinkle for a two-bagger off the left field wall and the tying run was home.

At which point, Al Kozar didn't dally. He rapped Trinkle for a fierce single to left to score Noren and Yost, and wrap up the ball game. The Phils did get a hit off Welteroth in the ninth, but he sent 'em back to Clearwater muttering about the way he fanned Hollmig to end the game.

There was nothing tainted about the two runs the Nats scored against Hank Borowy, one-time Yankee and Cub ace, early in the game. The two hits he allowed in three innings were both homers. Yost walloped a towering fly ball over the fence in left center, and in the third inning Coan made a pigmy of that blow with a line-drive sock out of the park in dead center.

Coans's smack cleared the wall by plenty, at the 375-foot marker, and Manager Bucky Harris was duly impressed.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 13 (AP). Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill., today put together a 33-36—69 for a one-stroke lead in the professional's opening day round of the 54-hole $10,000 Seminole Golf Club's amateur-professional tournament.

Hogan took a seven on the par four 15th hole.

Sammy Snead, leading money winner of the year so far with four major tournament victories, turned in one of the highest scores of the day, 77.

A stroke behind Ransom at 70 today were E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, St. Andrews, Ill; Lew Worsham, Oakmont, Pa.; Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., and Roberto Di Vicenzo, Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Bradley, St. John's Win in NIT

New York, March 13 (AP).—Top ranked Bradley University and St. John's of Brooklyn surged when their opponents sagged tonight to gain the semifinal round of the National Invitation Basketball Tournament.

Bradley's crisp-passing, sharp-shooting Braves turned back an inspired Syracuse team, 78-66. St. John's expelled Western Kentucky's Beanstalks, 69-60, to climax a nerve-stabbing night before 18,000 Madison Square Garden fans.

These two seeded entries—Bradley, No. 1 and St. John's, No. 4—will clash Thursday night to wrangle for a finalist berth.

The other semifinalists will be determined in a doulbeheader tomorrow. Duquesne, seeded third, will meet La Salle in the first game at 8 p. m. (EST) and Kentucky, seeded second, will face CCNY in the afterpiece.

The two games tonight followed a similar pattern—fought to the hilt for three quarters of the way, and then decided when both Syracuse and Western Kentucky slumped midway of the final half.

Syracuse went 11 minutes without scoring a field goal against Bradley after playing the Braves on even terms for 30 minutes of activity.

Western Kentucky lost its shooting sights completely and went nine minutes without scoring a field goal near the end of the game against St. John's.

Asbestos Man Forms Softball Team

Pin-Up Girls Should Be Hot Stuff

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

HERE'S the hottest story to hit this department since the Nats won nine straight last year. An asbestos worker is organizing a girl's softball team.

"Should be some fun, eh?" chuckled Herbie Needham, 23-year-old asbestos hot shot who along with Donald A. Matthews, a physicist, is responsible for this most worthwhile project.

"We're calling our team the Pin-Up Girls. I know a good many of the players and they're beauts. And some of 'em can play softball, too."

Needham, who's single (natch!), says he and some friends have been kicking the idea around for about a year.

"It all happened last year up at the Just for Fun Club," he explained. "We tried to organize a man's softball team, but the response was so poor and the players so bad that this year we decided to abandon the men's team and form a girls' club.

"And the interest is terrific—even the girls are interested."

Needham and his associates have started the ball rolling with a mail campaign to newspapers and camera clubs. Neat little red and blue cards announce the first practice for March 25.

"THE MOST beautiful girls in Washington play with the Pin-Up Girls," it says right on the card in fine blue print.

"Seldom has a team combined such charm and loveliness with extraordinary athletic ability. The beauties will pose for lensmen from camera clubs who are advised to bring color film," the announcement continues.

"The Pin-Up Girls have open dates on their schedules, have no sponsor, want none, will schedule games only with amateur, nonprofit groups. The Pin-Up Girls, by joining forces with the Pin-Up Boys, will also schedule mixed games, but only with amateur, nonprofit groups."

Herbie said he had thought of having the girls wear lace panties, Georgeous Gussie style, but later decided against it.

"They can wear as little or as much as they want," he advised. "Last year I remember a couple of girls came out with long skirts and played. One of 'em got a hit, picked up her skirt and ran like mad to first base. She was a real character, wasn't she?"

Entire Navy Hasn't Been Mothballed

NAVY'S SWIMMING victory over Columbia Saturday was a cause for double rejoicing at Annapolis. It ended a losing streak of eight straight and also proved to skeptics that the Navy still has something afloat . . . First casualty of Maryland's spring football practice was Harry Bates, a candidate for assistant manager. According to George Carroll, Terps publicity director, Bates was "knocked down by a bevy of fast moving players, but received only a slight concussion" . . . Insiders report Coach Jim Tatum was disappointed in the bevy's showing . . . Three of the seven pitchers who have beaten the Yankees more times than the Yankees have beaten them are with the Detroit Tigers. Tops is Hal Newhouser, with a 29-24 mark against New York; next is Art Houtteman (5-3) and the other is Fred Hutchinson (7-6) . . . A fourth Tiger hurler, Dizzy Trout, has broken even in 42 decisions with New York . . . The 280 score Sam Snead posted in the 1939 Masters tournament would have been good enough to have won the coveted title for him in eight other Masters meets, including last year when Snead won with a 282 . . . In 1939, however, Ralph Guldahl shot what was then a record 279 to nudge the Slammer by a stroke. Guldahl's 279 was equaled in 1948 by Claude Harmon . . .

NO WONDER Johnny Norlander found no prospects for the Caps in Birmingham, Ala., where he went to scout the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament. The tournament was played in Louisville, Ky. . . . Matchmaker Gabe Menendez of Turner's Arena has a weekend date with Lou Viscusi, manager of featherweight champion Willie Pep. Menendez wants to sign the winner of Friday's Pep-Ray Famechon title bout for a nontitle scrap with Jimmy Cooper for Griffith Stadium in May . . . The Daily Tar Heel, North Carolina student publication, is heading a drive to switch the Maryland-North Carolina football game from Chapel Hill to Washington. Students want the trip, the paper points out . . . Some 15,000 Carolinians invaded D. C. for the 1948 fracas and were rewarded with a 49-20 victory and a lively week-end . . . No Nats' pitcher has a winning lifetime record in the majors. Closest to it is Ray Scarborough, who owns a 47 won, 48 lost mark for six years . . . Two "championships" will be at stake on Wednesday's Turner's Arena wrestling card. Mildred Burke risks her women's title against Elvira Snodgrass, who'll be putting her women's hillbilly crown on the line. MORRIS SIEGEL.

4-Year-Old, 2d Choice, Pays $6.40

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Mar. 13. P. H. Simms' Fiesta, an invader from Florida, made good at the first asking here today. The 4-year-old daughter of Ariel and Pleasure Bent found the muddy track to her liking and stuck by her running to win by a neck in the Harpers Ferry purse featuring the Monday program.

The judges were forced to call on the camera to separate three of the six horses in the field. Second money went to James Stuart's Ranger Mosby with Stanley Greene, jr's Grand Surprise the close-up third.

With Ranger Mosby the lukewarm favorite, Fiesta paid $6.40 and was clocked in 1:20 2/5 for the about six furlongs over a soggy track. Rain fell here last night and this morning and the program was conducted under threatening skies.

Fiesta, locally owned, was prominent all the way, being closest to the early pace of Grand Surprise. Ranger Mosby was slightly bothered leaving the gate and was far back as the field reached the backstretch.

The ultimate winner, then went to the front of Grand Surprise and Lewis A. D. began to make up some ground. Ranger Mosby was under a drive and gaining gradually as the field rounded the far turn.

In the final drive, Fiesta was placed to strong handling by Jockey Richard Williams, a logical move, too for Ranger Mosby came with a bold rush on the outside, collaring Grand Surprise and barely failing to get to Fiesta.

Jimmy Baird, leading rider at the meeting, added two more to his long string of victories. Both were for S. H. Rogers of Washington, D. C. Baird took the fourth at $4 with Woofie and the seventh with Gunner at $6.

Dear Folks:
Wonder if there's any truth in the humor that Hagerstown and Cumberland want to shift their dates to May and June following the close of Havre de Grace and the second meeting here? This would pit the two half-milers against Delaware Park and a trotting track. Laurel will have a lot of improvements, many centering around the Stevens concessions. The "Graw" also is sprucing up, King Naaman, odds-on favorite, broke down so badly in today's second race that he was mercifully destroyed. Two races daily are being aired into Washington via Chuck Dulane's WGAY program. The Atwod busses will continue to go to this track through the meeting supplementing the service of the race train. See you on the rail. BILL.

Yost, Coan Homer in 7-5 Victory ball for his three-inning stint, giving up a run in the third that temporarily tied the score for the Phils. It happened with two out, after Scarborough walked two. Cabalerro singled the run home.

Against Donnelly in the fifth, Kozar and Mickey Grasso bumped a pair of singles and with two out and the bases full, Dente produced two runs with a single to right that lifted the Nats' lead to 5-1.

The Phils got all that back, and more, against Sutherland in the sixth. The rookie snuck past two scoreless innings before Sisler greeted him with a single and Hollmig and Sanicki drew walks that filled the bases with none out. Mike Goliat doubled to deep center for two runs, a third scored on Heyman's Texas League single, and a fourth moved in on Miller's fly to the outfield.

That added up to the Phils' 5-4 lead they couldn't hold.

IN SHORT . . . Buck Newsom, still pining for a Washington contract, warmed up in a Nats' uniform before the game and announced "I was never faster." It fell on Bucky Harris' deliberately dead ears. Charlie Justice, the unsigned Redskin draft choice, was at the game as the guest of his brother Joe, coach at nearby Rollins College. Justice says he won't play pro football unless the Redskins pay him a lot more than they've offered . . . Sid Hudson frankly confessed he had nothing on the ball against the A's the other day. "I was throwing hard but the ball wasn't going fast," he said. In a couple of weeks he says his pitches will start "doing things"

Flask-Grown Glands Produce Hormones

New York, March 13 (AP).—Pituitary glands, the master glands of life, are being grown in glass houses and are yielding cheap harvests of scarce, expensive hormones, it was disclosed tonight.

One harvest is hormones that stimulate sex glands to make sex hormones. Another is ACTH, a wonder hormone for arthritis. Another is a hormone that controls body growth.

This far-reaching achievement was announced by Dr. Leonard Scheele, surgeon general, United States Public Health Service. He spoke at the premier of a new film, "Challenge—Science Against Cancer," describing research on the cause and cure of cancer.

The new method may lead to practical, mass production of these vital hormones, Dr. Scheele said.

The pituitary glands are taken from rats. But they produce hormones just like those made by the human pituitary.

The pituitary is a pea-sized organ at the base of the brain. Its hormones regulate other glands, including the thyroid, the male or female sex glands, and the adrenal glands.

The rat glands are kept alive in small glass flasks. They are bathed in a solution of horse serum and an extract from chick embryos.

More than 150 rat glands have been grown this way, some as long as 10 weeks.

As the gland grows, it keeps producing its potent hormones. Three times each week, the fluid is taken from the flask, and the hormones are extracted.

The gland work was done at the National Cancer Institute by Dr. Roy Hertz, chief, and William Tullner of the endocrinology section; Dr. Virginia Evans, Dr. Walton Earle and Mrs. Helen Waltz of the tissue culture unit there.

Other glands probably can be kept alive in the same way. A next step will be to grow pituitary, thyroid, sex glands, and adrenal gland in the same bottle, to learn more about the interplay of these chemical regulators. Such knowledge would help in understanding what hormones do, and the relation between hormones and cancer, Dr. Scheele said.

A Study in Royalty: Gustav and Leopold . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SWEDEN AND BELGIUM—Gustav, 92-year-old King of the Swedes, vacationing in Nice, receives exiled King Leopold shortly before Belgium was plunged into a crisis by Sunday's referendum in which 57.6 percent of the Belgians voted for Leopold's return to the throne. Leopold has returned to his home in Geneva, Switzerland, to await developments

Leopold Vote Widens Rift

Foreign Minister Paul van Zeeland, was en route to Geneva with a completely contradictory recommendation.

The 48-year-old monarch, who incurred unpopularity for his early surrender to the Germans in 1940, received a 57.6 percent majority in the nation as a whole in an advisory plebiscite Sunday, but failed to win the French-speaking south.

The only result of the advisory referendum, it appeared, was to advise King and Parliament that Belgium is of two nearly equal minds about whether it wants Leopold back.

The Liberals, whose votes in Parliament could be the deciding factor in any decision to invite the King to return, also split. One leader said the party should stick to its preplebiscite position—that Leopold could return only if he won a majority in all three of the nation's main divisions.

These divisions are Flanders, the Flemish-speaking North (72.2 percent Leopold), the southern Walloons (40.2 percent Leopold) and nearly evenly divided Brabant (50.2 percent Leopold). Brussels, the capital in Brabant, was lost to Leopold by some 30,000 votes.

Meanwhile, King Leopold remained silent behind the heavy iron gates of his chateau near Geneva. He was not expected to make any announcement on the results until he had conferred with his various advisers.

Before the plebiscite, he said he would abdicate unless he received 55 percent of the votes. His vote exceeded this by only a narrow margin.

Israel-Jordan Pact Reported Near Signing

Cairo, Egypt, March 13 (AP).—Authoritative but private sources reported today that an agreement has been reached between Israel and the Jordan kingdom on a five-year nonaggression pact but has struck a snag in the Jordan cabinet.

Sources from Amman confirmed reports from Jerusalem of an agreement, but denied it actually had been signed, as Jerusalem dispatches said. Israeli Foreign officials at Tel Aviv also denied that an agreement had been signed.

A nonaggression pact would extend the present armistice agreement signed at Rhodes on April 3, 1949.

Foreign diplomatic observers in Jersualem said such an agreement would have two important effects. In the eyes of Israel and Jordon it would diminish the chances of Jerusalem being internationalized, as contemplated by a resolution of the United Nations Assembly. It also would improve chances of an eventual peace treaty between the two nations, and put a damper on talk of a new war over Palestine.

Authoritative sources said a controversial clause by which Jordan agreed to open its markets to Israeli manufactured goods was blocking the agreement in the Jordan cabinet.

Seretse Exile Will Stand, London Hears

London, March 13 (AP).—At the risk of party disunity, Prime Minister Attlee's cabinet will stand firm on its decision to exile Seretse Khama, African ruler, and his white wife from the British Bechuanaland protectorate, informants said today.

In standing pat on the decision to ban Seretse from the protectorate for five years, Attlee faced the problem of quelling a smoldering revolt among labor MP's who argue their party was elected on a platform of "fair shares for all." They said this slogan includes Seretse and other non-white members of the empire.

The party, in a precarious position by virtue of its slim 6-vote majority in the House of Commons, is due to face debate on the Seretse case in the House of Commons Wednesday.

Informants said Attlee is expected to stand by his Commonwealth Relations Minister, Patrick Gordon-Walker, in the job of pacifying the government's restless supporters.

The 28-year-old Seretse, Negro ruler of the Bamangwato tribesmen, married a London stenographer last year. He was barred from his native land "because I dared to love and accept the love of a white woman."

The government says that allowing Seretse to rule over the tribesmen might bring trouble in the area.

Word reached the Commonwealth Relations Office that headmen of Seretse's 100,000-strong Bamangwato tribe boycotted a conference called this morning by British High Commissioner Sir Evelyn Baring to tell the headmen of Britain's reasons for exiling Seretse.

Layoff Notices Given To 200 VA Employes At District Office

VA's regional office here is having a rough time. Two hundred of its 800 employes were given layoff notices over the weekend. The reduction will get the office down to about 725 employes from a 1500-man high of only 18 months ago.

Actually, only 96 jobs will be abolished and 76 employes will go off the payroll on April 10. RIF notices were given to 200 employes, however, to allow for bumpings, demotions, reasonable offers, and so forth.

At VA headquarters, where several hundred additional employes are to be fired, its medical department and special services have been given a few days longer in which to fire 91 and 55 employes respectively.

STORY: Virginia Federal workers, in hushed tones, are telling this story:

A Republican moved to Arlington and presented himself to the central registrar to qualify to vote. The registrar instructed him to follow the signs painted on the doors. The first two were "MALE" and "FEMALE."

He took the proper one and later was confronted with two other doors marked "NEW VOTER" and "OLD VOTER." Entering the New Voter door he was eventually faced with two more doors which read "DEMOCRATIC" and "REPUBLICAN."

He entered the one marked Republican and found himself in the office of Senator Byrd (D., Va.).

NOTES: The budget for St. Elizabeths Hospital here proposes an increase in its staff from 2475 to 2600 workers . . . The American Battle Monuments Commission estimates it must pay $17,500 each for flagpoles . . . VA has appealed the Civil Service order to downgrade its 2000 registration officers from GS-9 to GS-7. A final decision on it won't be made for several months . . . General Accounting Office expects to move into its new building by September of next year . . . AFL's East Coast Metal Trades Council is meeting at the Annapolis Hotel here. Among the problems being discussed are the Defense Department's wage policy; the threat to cutback sick and annual leave, and military personnel doing civilian jobs.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service today will start to accept applications for biologist jobs ($3825 to $6400 starting salaries) in the Fish and Wildlife Service, and for research psychologist ($3825 to $4600) at the Naval Submarine Base, New London, Conn.

COMING EXAMS: A test for 10 different types of radio, wire and phone communications jobs at $2875 to $6400 starting salaries will be announced in a couple of weeks by Civil Service . . . Also coming up are tests for lithographic offset pressman, offset duplicating press operator, offset duplicating unit supervisor, and printing and bindery plant operative. The jobs pay from $1.02 to $2.19 an hour.

FIRINGS: Civil Service has ordered the firings of war service and temporary employes here by June 30 in these jobs: information specialist, information and editorial clerk, and proofreading clerk. The jobs pay from $3100 to $6400, and they will be filled by persons who passed the recent competitive test.

TURNOVER has dropped to a new postwar low in Government. Only 19,554 employes in this country either quit or transferred from full-time Federal jobs during last November and December. Turnover was five times as great in 1944, and twice as high only a year ago.

TOP JOBS: The so-called "elite 400" in Government should be selected this week. Tentative selections were agreed on at several conferences last week.

The Reclassification Act of 1949 provided for the new grades and jobs as follows: 300 jobs in GS-16, $11,200 to $12,000; 75 jobs in GS-17, $12,200 to $13,000, and 25 jobs in GS-18, $14,000. The President is given final authority to make selections for the 25 GS-18 jobs.

Auto Injuries Take Life of R. Robbins, Theater Head

Trans-Lux Manager Struck on Tuesday; Sailor Dies, 2 Others Hurt in Accidents

District traffic deaths this year 15
Deaths this date last year 16
Total traffic deaths, 1949 71

Roland Summer Robbins, 70, manager of the Trans-Lux Theater here since its opening in 1937, died yesterday of injuries suffered in a traffic accident last Tuesday evening.

Police said Robbins was struck at Piney Branch rd., and Sheridan st. nw., by an auto driven by Dr. Charles H. Wolohon, 55, a physician, who lives at 500 Underwood st. nw.

He was taken to Garfield Hospital, suffering from a compound fracture of the left leg, head cuts, and a possible skull fracture. He died there at 2:55 p. m., yesterday.

Exact cause of his death will be determined at an autopsy today.

Wife Seriously Ill

Business associates said his only survivor is his wife, Mrs. Simone Robbins, with whom he lived at 6215 14th st. nw. She was reported seriously ill yesterday.

Associates said that Mr. Robbins was born in New England, and had been in the theater business most of the time since he was in high school. He was formerly manager of the old Keith's Theater here, when it played vaudeville, but left the business 23 years ago when vaudevile was discontinued. He returned to it when the Trans-Lux Theater opened.

No charges were placed against Dr. Wolohon at the time of the accident.

In other accidents:

A Fairfax County war veteran was in Alexandria Hospital with critical injuries and two brothers were under arrest in that city as result of the accident in which he was struck. The victim is Edloe W. Wright, jr., 32, of Route 3, Alexandria.

Wright

Wright was suffering from a brain laceration, paralysis of the left arm and a fractured right leg.

Arrested in the case were two brothers, Lester Henry, 18, Route 2, Alexandria, and Clay Henry Chumley, 23, of 213 Moncure dr., Alexandria. Both were charged with failing to stop after an accident, and Chumley also charged with driving while under influence of alcohol.

Police said Wright was a pedestrian on Callahan dr., Alexandria, near King st. and Russell rd., about 11:15 p. m. Sunday. They said the car carrying Henry and Chumley made a left turn across the road, struck Wright and continued into a ditch, and then kept going. It was stopped shortly afterward and the brothers arrested.

Cases of the two were continued in Alexandria Civil and Police Court yesterday, pending outcome of Wright's injuries.

A sailor died yesterday at Bethesda Naval Hospital as result of a broken neck suffered early Sunday near Salisbury, Md.

Sailor Identified

He was Robert Lee Runion, 24, a seaman attached to the Naval Ordnance Testing Station at Chincoteague, Va. Dr. F. J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said he was informed Runion was injured in an auto accident on Route 113, near Salisbury, Md., early Sunday. The young man was flown to Washington after preliminary treatment in a Salisbury hospital.

In Fair Condition

One woman was in fair condition at Emergency Hospital last night following a collision between her husband's auto and a Capital Transit bus.

Mrs. Ann McCrary, 37, was severely cut about the face, neck and head last night when an auto driven by her husband, Col. John A. McCrary, jr., USAF, collided with a Capital Transit bus at 44th and Jennifer sts. nw.

Their children, Michael and Susan, twins, 3 years old, and John 3d, 11 years old, suffered bruises, as did Colonel McCrary. The family lives at 5308 Worthington dr., Westgate, Md.

Police said the bus was driven by Richard Hall, 22, of 1542 S st. ne. No charges were made, but police said a hearing will be called later in the Corporation Counsel's office on the case.

4 Plumbing Thieves Put On 5-Year Probation

Four men yesterday received suspended two-year sentences and were placed on five-year probation in Fairfax County Circuit Court after pleading guilty to thefts of plumbing equipment from the Shirley-Duke apartment project.

They are Raymond B. Fultz, 27, Thomas O. McGovern, jr., 30, and Thurman B. Campbell, 29, all of Front Royal, Va.; and Leslie P. Henry, 33, Lincolnia, Va. They were charged with grand larceny.

Charged With Hitting Police, Two Say They Were Beaten

The arraignment of two former Marines charged with assaulting a Bladensburg, Md., policeman after they had been ordered to leave a night club was continued yesterday until next Monday.

The arraignment had been scheduled yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court.

The former Marines, Walter Boepple, 25, of 209 Cedar ave., Takoma Park, and Charles Hesse, 22, of 3921 Ames st. ne., who also are charged with being drunk and disorderly, had a different version of the affair.

Free for the moment in $600 bond each, they told reporters it was they who were beaten by Pvts. William A. Baxter and Albert Fierstein of the Bladensburg town police force.

Saturday Night

The incident took place Saturday night at the Dixie Pig Barbecue at Bladensburg Peace Cross.

Bladensburg Chief of Police Henry J. Nebel commented yesterday:

"I prefer to let the officers tell their story to the judge."

Nebel said his investigation showed the officers were warranted to take the action they did, that Boepple and Hesse were annoying patrons in the Dixie Pig and had been asked to leave by the management. He said the management called police when they became "pugnacious."

Nebel said witnesses told him one of the men attacked Policeman Baxter at the restaurant and also that both Hesse and Boepple had started to attack Baxter and Fierstein at the police station when their handcuffs were removed. One of the men broke Fierstein's belt, Nebel added.

Boepple and Hesse told reporters they had been drinking beer at the Dixie Pig and danced with several unescorted women.

"No Stag" Rule

They were told to leave, they said, because of a "no stag" rule. A policeman, who had been called by the management, entered the restaurant as they were leaving, the former Marines said.

Hesse said the policeman, later identified as Baxter, shoved him. Hesse said he caught the policeman by the legs and the latter sat down.

Both former Marines claimed they were struck by the two policemen after reaching the Hyattsville substation.

Boepple served with the Third Marine Division on Guam and Hesse with the First Marine Air Wing.

Knife Killings Lead to Two Indictments

Walter W. Arnold, 50, of 1014 7th st. ne., yesterday was indicted for manslaughter in the fatal knifing of another man following an argument over the age of Union Station.

According to police, Arnold said he knifed James Lyles, 35, of 638 Callan st. ne., last February 19 after Lyles threatened him with an ice pick.

The action, according to the statement began with Lyles contending that the station was at least 40 years old. Arnold took an opposite viewpoint. The verbal clash led to bottle-throwing by Lyles, according to the statement, followed by the ice pick and knife incidents.

Another knife-slaying resulted in the manslaughter indictment of Willie L. James, 36, of 933 O st. nw.

James was charged with the slaying of Floyd L. Turner, 34, of Stanley, Va., after, according to James, Turner and two companions attacked him when he refused to give Turner a dime handout. James formerly boxed professionally under the name of King Kong.

Hot "Chitlins"

A pot of boiling "chitlins" allegedly thrown at a woman brought George J. Young, 31, of 531 26th st. nw., under indictment for assault with a dangerous weapon.

The woman, Bertha B. Melton, 529 26th st. nw., said she was hospitalized for eight days with second-degree burns following the incident.

Samuel E. Briles, 42, of 2809 15th st. nw., and John Lanzalotta, 36, of 1751 Park rd. nw., were indicted for setting up a gaming table.

The men were arrested at 1410 Girard st. nw. last February 11. Police acting on information, entered the apartment without a warrant. They seized a quantity of alleged race-betting paraphernalia and arrested two men

Embezzlement Charged

According to police, Baccus was responsible for making collections from Washington dealers to be sent to the home office. The indictment enumerated 20 counts in which Baccus was alleged to have kept collections for his own use.

Vance C. Nessly, 19, of 518 Missouri av. nw., was indicted for grand larceny in connection with the theft of men's clothing and accessories from a locker in the basement at 5220 North Capitol st.

The grand jury returned true bills in 22 cases and ignored charges in five.

Alexandria Hospital To Be Given Incubator

The Jewish War Veterans Auxiliary of the Corporal Israel Kleinman Post No. 588 will present an incubator and stand today at 3:30 p. m. to the Alexandria Hospital. Members of the auxiliary and hospital officials will be present when the gifts are handed over. The money was raised through a card party and white elephant sale.

Tax Evasion Case Called For Sheriff

The case of R. Earle Sheriff, former sheriff and deputy sheriff of Prince Georges County, will be called in Federal District Court in Baltimore, Friday, for his arraignment on income tax evasion charges.

Sheriff was indicted a week ago on charges that he evaded a total of $10,430 in Federal income taxes in the years 1943 through 1946, when he was county sheriff.

Four hours before the indictment was returned, he resigned as chief deputy sheriff of the county, a post he held since 1947.

The true bill returned by the Federal grand jury charged that in his four years as sheriff, Sheriff actually received a total net income of $43,462, but reported only $8463. His tax paid, the indictment charged, was $919 when it should have been $11,349.

White House Gets Girl Scout Measure

The Senate approval sent to the White House yesterday a bill granting a Federal charter to the Girl Scouts of the United States of America. The Senate acted on the thirty-eighth birthday of the organization, open to girls from 7 to 17 years of age.

Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the President, was listed in the measure as chief sponsor of the charter.

PUC Orders Bus Service On New Span

Capital Transit Bid for Extra-Fare Rush Hour Service Is Turned Down

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday told the Capital Transit Co. to provide service at regular rates over the new South Capitol Street Bridge or face an investigation.

The commission ordered the new service after turning down a request by the company to operate extra-fare rush hour buses over the bridge.

Both the public interest and the interest of the company would be served by rerouting a portion of bus lines now using the Eleventh Street Bridge to the South Capitol Bridge, the commission said.

It was pointed out that the downtown area can be reached more quickly and at a saving in distance if buses go by way of the new bridge.

In turning down the company's request, the commission said that Capital Transit failed to show that public interest requires express bus service at an additional fare.

The commission said it would approve promptly an application by the company to run regular service over the new bridge.

If such a request was not made, the commission said it felt that an investigation of service in the Anacostia area should be authorized.

The company asked for a 5-cent additional fare for rush-hour service between Livingston Manor in the southeast and 10th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. By using the new bridge the company would cut more than a mile off the route.

The bus would be routed by way of 3d st. se., Livingston st., South Capitol st., Canal st. and Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. nw.

E. Cleveland Giddings, vice president of Capital Transit, said that the company was disappointed in the commission's decision but would study the possibility of rerouting regular lines over the new bridge.

County Group Favors New Road Statutes

After two hours of discussion, the Montgomery County Civic Federation last night passed a resolution favoring adoption by the county of a revised road ordinance.

Earlier in the meeting, two other resolutions on the same subject were defeated.

The one finally accepted with only three dissenting votes was introduced by Allan B. Fay of the Capitol View Park Citizens Association.

It called for "the early adoption of a road ordinance revised from the proposed ordinance in the light of testimony given at current hearings."

The first resolution proposed was that of Walter Verdier, chairman of the Federation's roads, streets and bridges committee, by which the federation would approve the ordinance with only one change.

This change would have eliminated the provision making sidewalks mandatory on secondary residential streets and substituted a clause that these sidewalks be installed only at the request of the property owners affected.

This resolution was voted down, in effect, by a 43-to-17 vote when it was decided to take up a second resolution offered by Blair Lee 3d, representing the Silver Spring Board of Trade, which also was defeated, 40 to 17.

Former D.C. Newspaper Couple To Observe 50th Anniversary

Claude S. Watts was continually getting off the subject yesterday when broached about the golden anniversary today of his marriage to Marie Van Riper Watts.

Slowly but surely he reached the heart of the matter. "You know that newspaper people don't like publicity," he said finally. "But I suppose this is inevitable," he added knowingly.

Watts knew all about it because his newspaper experience reaches even farther back than March 14, 1900 when he married Mrs. Watts in Anderson, Ind. And he agrees it's a good story.

It's good because since the 22-year-old country editor interrupted the 18-year-old De Pauw sophomore's college career with a marriage proposal, they've been together and happy, the quick shifts and turmoils of a newspaper life notwithstanding.

But at 72, Watts would rather have publicity for his pet crusade—improvement of labor-management relations—which he's been pushing since the first World War.

Now living at Clifton Terrace, 14th and Clifton sts. nw., Watts came here in 1904 as Washington correspondent for the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. Mrs. Watts followed early in 1905.

He was later a correspondent here for the Cleveland Leader. In his younger days, Watts also wrote short stories "about young love and politics" for the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, the old Munsey and McClure's magazines. Mrs. Watts, an editor of the Haskin Information Service for 20 years, was one of the early members of the American Newspaper Women's' Club.

The couple will be honored at a small celebration at the home of their only daughter, Mrs. Minier Hostetler, at Gatton's Adventure, near Potomac, Md.

Dentists Show Versatility In Hobby Exhibit at Clinic

The Washington Post
Dr. Swanson shown with some of his model racing cars

The nimble fingers of a Washington dentist—and some of his dental tools as well—do overtime work at his home, building midget racing cars that can do up to 138 miles per hour.

The Barney Oldfield of the D. C. Dental Society, Dr. John H. Swanson of 8303 Ellingson dr., Silver Spring, is but one of several dentists whose delicate and artistic hobbies are exhibited at the current postgraduate clinic of the local dental society at the Shoreham Hotel.

There are handsome examples of bracelets, cat's-eye buttons and other jewelry fashioned by Dr. William E. McCain, jr., of Arlington, who admits he couldn't possibly do the work if he didn't take his dental tools home with him. He picked up the cat's-eye seashells while on duty in the South Pacific.

Another Washington dental practitioner, Dr. L. L. Leathers, 1746 K st. nw., is exhibiting a collection of Kodachrome enlargements which he took and processed himself. Dr. Walter E. Lawson, 2636 Monroe st. ne., has an array of about 20 trophies he garnered in sailboat racing in the Chesapeake Bay area.

Dr. Swanson, the racing car enthusiast, proudly showed off two of his models to fellow dentists yesterday, but declined to link up his work on the intricate mechanism of the midgets to his dentistry.

Dentists Gather Here for Clinic

More than 3000 dentists, dental technicians and assistants crowded the Shoreham Hotel yesterday for the first full session of the eighteenth annual Postgraduate Clinic of the D. C. Dental Society.

Dr. Philip E. Adams, president of the American Dental Association, told the dentists at the opening luncheon they must take an active part in the planning of dental health programs at the community level.

Such local dental health programs, the ADA's answer to compulsory health insurance, must fit into the social changes occurring at this time, he said.

Registered clinics, where six outstanding dentists in various fields will teach and demonstrate methods and techniques, will be held today and Wednesday, beginning at 9:30 a.m., along with the table clinics and exhibits.

Jail in Prince Georges Hit By Inspector From State

Reidt Cites Filth, Vermin; Morale Of Prisoners Also Said to Be Bad

The Prince Georges County Jail at Upper Marlboro, under fire since 1946 for alleged insanitary and other bad conditions, received a new blast of criticism yesterday.

Wallace Reidt, jail inspector for the Maryland State Board of Correction, charged that corridors, cells, and mattresses are dirty, vermin are in the cells, and that morale of prisoners is bad.

Told of the newest criticism, Sheriff T. Ward Martin of Prince Georges County said that most of the new allegations are incorrect and that the conditions complained of by Inspector Reidt have been remedied.

Reidt made the condemnation in his annual report to the Board of Correction, according to the Associated Press.

Others Criticize

Grand juries, previous Board of Corrections inspections, Parent-Teacher Association officials, and a Congressman who recently was jailed over two nights in the county's lockup, voiced some or all of the same criticisms since 1946, records showed last night.

"The corridors and cells were found to be in rather dirty condition and mattresses were in a very dirty condition also and many unfit for use," Reidt wrote. "No towels are given prisoners, and there are no mattress covers. There were roaches in the cells. Meals are served in the cells.

"Special Note: There always seems to be a very tense situation at this jail. The inspector has made it a point to visit place every couple of months and things are never good. The prisoners are unusually surly and anxious to make trouble, and overcrowding is very serious. In addition, jailers do not seem to have complete confidence in themselves to handle prisoners."

Sheriff's Reply

To these things, Sheriff Martin replied:

"I can show that that's not correct. The last time Reidt contacted me, he said that things in the jail were much improved and in good shape. As to the mattresses, it's hard to keep them clean. We have them laundered regularly and some are at a laundry in Marlboro now.

"About the prisoners being surly, the last time he visited, he said he didn't notice that any more. I think the other times he visited were just about at court sessions or immediately before them, when the jail was full and the prisoners going on trial or just about to. Naturally, they aren't feeling good about things at those times."

As to Reidt's recommendations that the electrical and plumbing systems be gone over and an oil burner installed, Sheriff Martin said all these things have been done. He said he would go along with Reidt's suggestion that the present contracting-out of feeding be transferred to the jail, but insisted the food contractor is "doing a good job."

Montgomery Jail O. K.

The Montgomery County jail at Rockville received a good bill of health from Inspector Reidt, with the exception of minor recommendations for painting, and major suggestion that the county board instead of the county sheriff operate it.

Irving G. McNayr said that the change of administrative responsibility has been approved in a bill passed by the recent session of the Maryland Legislature and now on the desk of Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., awaiting signature. He said the county repaints the jail each spring, and will do it again this spring.

Assembly Followed Gov. Battle's Lead

Richmond, Va., March 13 (AP).—Virginia's 1950 General Assembly worked in an atmosphere of conflicting recommendations but passed most of the legislative program to which Governor Battle committed himself in the Democratic gubernatorial primary last summer.

The Assembly refused to pass his recommendation that county board of supervisors name the school boards, and it provided for tax cuts for individual and corporate income taxpayers if the State's revenues are larger than expected.

But the weary legislators, who finally adjourned their biennial session Sunday at 3:40 a. m., fell in line and okayed most of the other views expressed by the Governor.

Abolition of rent controls in June, 1950.

Giving the Governor authority to seize and operate coal mines and distribute coal during a strike emergency.

Creation of the Virginia Judicial Conference and approval of new rules of court procedure.

Establishment of telephone cooperatives and requiring utilities to get a certificate of convenience and necessity from the State Corporation Commission.

Study of redistricting of the Legislature and Congress in preparation for the new census.

Conferring general powers of taxation, except where prohibited by the constitution or State law, on several cities.

Fifty-dollar tax on wholesale tobacco merchants, with funds appropriated to enforce the "Unfair Sales Act."

Permission for the Health Department to enter industries and to recommend, but not to pass regulations, for the elimination of occupational hazards.

An executive assistant to the Governor to carry forward the reorganization of the State government begun in 1948.

A tunnel under Hampton Roads.

A two-year stay of all annexation proceedings by cities of the first class, except for pending cases or those which may be filed before the bill's effective date.

Setting up a State-wide system of juvenile courts.

Removal of labor unions from the list of those exempt from the anti-monopoly statutes, but preserving the right to strike.

State preparation of uniform school building plans for localities.

Creation of a "living war memorial" for World War II veterans.

A floor of $2000 a year for properly certificated teachers.

Naming the cardinal the State bird of Virginia.

The list of bills which were killed and what they would have provided included:

Permission of heavier truck loads.

Sale of whisky by the drink.

State sale of whisky in half pints.

Reduction of the cost of hunting and fishing licenses.

Permitting city grocery stores to sell fortified wine.

Giving Virginians credit on State income tax returns for taxes paid the Federal Government.

All sales tax proposals.

A bond issue for a soldier bonus.

Permitting use of a "drunk-o-meter" in drunk driving cases.

Reducing small loan interest rates.

Weakening of the State Water Control Act.

Legalizing the "union shop" through amending the State "right to work" law.

Making "incurable" insanity grounds for divorce.

Boothe to Fight Travel Bias In Virginia

Hampton, Va., March 13 (AP).—A continued fight for abolition of segregation on common carriers in Virginia was promised by Delegate Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria in an address today at Hampton Institute.

Two measures looking toward that end sponsored by Boothe in the 1950 Virginia General Assembly failed of passage.

"Our defeat in the Legislature at this time has been not an end but a beginning," Boothe declared. "I can assure you and the people of Virginia that we shall be more determined than disgusted."

He described the Virginia constitution as providing a broader base for civil rights than the National Constitution. He quoted the first article of the State constitution, which guarantees that all men are by nature equally free and independent and have certain inherent rights of which they cannot be deprived.

Supreme Court To Judge GI And His Towel

A one-time Fort Belvoir, Va., soldier who complains Army surgeons left an 18-by-30-inch towel in his abdomen after an operation will have his story told before the Supreme Court.

The court yesterday agreed to hear his contention that he be allowed to sue the Government for $100,000 damages. He is Arthur K. Jefferson of Joppa, Md., near Baltimore.

District Court in Baltimore threw out his suit on the grounds the Federal Tort Claims Act, under which he sued, does not cover servicemen on active duty. Jefferson said the operation took place July 3, 1945, at Fort Belvoir but that the towel wasn't discovered until another operation eight months later. He contends that because of "negligence" during the Army operation he has permanently lost his ability to make a living as a civilian.

The high court also agreed yesterday to consider another suit by the heirs of a soldier burned to death in an Army barracks fire. The two cases will be argued together to determine the scope of the claims law.

ELIZABETH McGEE
. . . . 1950 Maid of Cotton

Cotton Tougher Than the Maid Who Wears It

A little drizzle won't hurt cotton clothes, but Washington's weather put the 1950 Maid of Cotton to bed yesterday.

Miss Elizabeth McGee, Spartanburg, S. C., 19-year-old who is representing the cotton states on a good-will fashion tour, was laid low yesterday with a cold but hopes to be out again today.

Miss McGee arrived in Washington late Sunday afternoon from Des Moines, one of the 10 cities she has already visited on her tour, and headed straight for a reunion with classmates at Holton Arms where she was president of the senior class of the student council before she left school to take up her duties as Maid of Cotton.

Miss McGee has been touring since February 5, following a full month in New York where she was outfitted by 30 fashion designers in every kind of cotton garment. She even has a cotton raincoat, and her luggage is cotton.

Miss McGee will go to England and France at the end of the week where she will be presented to the Cotton Board at Manchester, England, and to the French Cotton Syndicate. Cotton items of French and English manufacture will be added to her wardrobe there.

Today Miss McGee hopes to see Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan and Senator Olin Johnston of South Carolina with whom she had to cancel appointments yesterday.

Also on her schedule for today is a visit with Vice President Barkley in the Vice President's room in the Senate.

At 3:30 p. m. a tea in her honor will be given at the British Embassy with John Taylor, the Commercial Minister, and Mrs. Taylor as hosts.

Wednesday, the maid will be feted at a congressional reception to be given at the Statler Hotel from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. Following the reception, the maid will be featured model in an all-cotton fashion show presented by Jelleff's of Washington.

Serving as reception hostess will be: Mrs. Olin Johnston, Mrs. Burnet Maybank, wives of the South Carolina Senators; Mrs. Joseph Bryson, wife of Representative Bryson from the Spartanburg district, and Mrs. Clifford Davis, wife of Representative Davis of Memphis.

On Thursday, Miss McGee will make a guest appearance at a fashion show luncheon sponsored by the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Statler. On Friday she flies across the Atlantic for three weeks in England and France.

Jutila to Address Belle Haven Club

The Belle Haven Women's Club will meet today at 1:30 p. m. at the Belle Haven Country Club.

Jutila and First Secretary of the Legation, Olavi Munkki. Following the talk, a color movie of Finland's neighbors, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, will be shown.

Tea will be served.

'U. S. Designers Influence Paris Fashions'

By Peggy Preston

AMERICA has so influenced European designers that it is becoming increasingly difficult to select typically French designs in the Paris market.

That is the opinion of Mrs. Mary Jane Edwards, veteran merchandising executive for Woodward & Lothrop's, who has just returned from abroad with a collection of French and British originals. The group, made up of 25 costumes, was shown to the press yesterday at a luncheon at the store.

"Time and time again, throughout practically every important collection, American-inspired touches were evidenced," Mrs. Edwards pointed out. She cited as examples such items as sleeveless dresses and blouses, ¾ length sleeves, coolie type hats, camisole tops and molded torso lines. All of these Mrs. Edwards considers American in origin.

The growing importance of the American market to European designers is responsible for this trend, Mrs. Edwards believes. She added that another reason might be the repeated visits to this country of leading couturiers such as Dior, Balmain, Fath, etc. "These designers are bound to be influenced by American fashions and tastes as a result of their visits," she said.

Paris Still Holds World Prestige

HOWEVER, Mrs. Edwards does not consider that Paris is in danger of losing its fame as the fashion capital of the world. Its position is still strong, and backed by hundreds of years of tradition. Marie Antoinette established the tradition when she had her favorite designers dress dolls in copies of her own gowns. These were sent to the crowned heads of Europe, spreading word of the accomplishments of the French dressmakers. From this grew the world-wide acclaim of Paris as a fashion center.

This latest group of imports to reach Washington points up the interest of British and French designers in novelty necklines, short tight skirts and beautiful fabrics.

England, represented by Digby Morton and Peter Russell, remains true to its love of tweeds and other woolens. One of the handsomest in the group is a coat and dress ensemble by Morton called "Maple Sugar." The coat is of orange-tan and navy check; the slim, sheath-like dress of the plain tan wool has interesting details.

Fath Remains Most Capricious

THE PARIS group includes costumes by Christian Dior, Jacques Fath, Balenciaga, Jean Desses and Jeanne Lafaurie.

Fath, as usual, is the most capricious, and offers "little boy" touches which are guaranteed to catch the eye on most of his designs. Both he and Desses are flirting with the idea of a lowered waistline. Dior's designs, showing a definite American feeling, are the most likely to succeed in this country.

"Vert Galant" by Fath was selected primarily for its novelty blouse, which resembles a man's evening shirt. Made of pleated organdy, it has black aplaca cumberbund and bow at the collar. It is worn with a black and white pin-check skirt, and a straight jacket with a surprise belt in back—well down on the hipline.

Dior's navy blue wool morning dress is one of the most attractive in the collection. In it Dior has managed to creat a slim silhouette with a skirt that a woman can walk in, for a change. The skirt is composed of two layers of fabric, cut in a petal design, allowing for some knee action, despite the slimness of the cut. The neckline is also novel, cut low in a horseshoe shape and bound with his favorite white pique.

Chiffon Wool Arrests Notice

MOST UNUSUAL fabric in the collection is a chiffon wool made into a Grecian-type evening gown by Lafaurie. Bright orange in color, the fabric resembled pure silk chiffon in texture.

FLANGED hipline is focal point of this navy blue afternoon dress by Dior from the collection of French and British imports shown yesterday by Woodward & Lothrop's. Red chiffon belt and bow running through flange give further accent to this silhouette which is one of the season's most popular in Paris

TAWNY colors, ranging from yellow to orange, are favorite for spring among both British and French designers. Digby Morton of London uses a shade of orange-tan, combined with navy blue in the check of this wool coat.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After 30 Years Marriage to Neglectful Man, Woman Divorced Him; Nowadays When She Visits Her Sons' Homes, He Crashes in With New Wife

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After 30 years of marriage, none too happy, I got a divorce from my husband, who was always chasing rainbows and wasn't very nice to our two sons. He never really supported them. The burden fell on my parents, who sent both boys through college.

Now that both boys are married and established in business in different towns, where they are known in public life, their father starts to strut and say how much the boys mean to him and what he did for them. That we don't mind; we know better, but he never lets them know when he is coming to see them. He just barges in with his second wife, and there I am—as I visit one son or the other occasionally, to stay for a week at a time.

I was at Peter's a few days ago and guests were coming for dinner who meant a great deal to his business. We were just about to go into dinner when in walks my former husband and his wife.

First Wife Feels No Envy of Second

PETER WAS beside himself, Mary Lou fought back tears (as her beautiful table had to be changed), and as introductions were made, there was a peculiar look in the eyes of some of the guests we didn't know too well. I would have preferred to go to my room and stay there, but I couldn't let the kids down. Neither could I make any special effort to be nice to the intruders and all of us were much upset.

Peter has asked his dad to say in advance when he is coming, but John won't do that. I know the objective is to embarrass me and Peter's family. If I were the second wife, I would not care to be in the company of the first one and, although my elder son thinks I am old-fashioned, I don't agree. Shall I forego the pleasure of visits to my sons' families—visits they want me to make—in order to avoid these embarrassing incidents?

I am not jealous of the woman; she worked long and hard to get him and she earned him. I am only sorry that I hadn't the backbone to leave him years ago when the boys were small; and then I might have found a real helpmeet and been spared many heartaches. But woe is me, how to act, what to do now? K. V.

Man Is Bothered at Missing Boat

DEAR K. V.: It appears that John's behavior in the ascending years of parenthood was that of a man who had no faith in himself, hence ran hither and yon in quest of "magic" success, instead of attending to the duties at hand. And if his manner toward you has gathered hostility over the years, no doubt that is because he has long identified you with his accusatory conscience, which he is always fighting guiltily.

He is a problem, yes, and always has been in relation to intimates, I should guess. Certainly he has been a special trial to you, firstly in his persistent neglect of a father's obligations, and more recently in his refusal to be washed out of the family-group picture by divorce, as his sons begin to take on stature as men of importance in their community.

His knowledge of the boys' substantial character and civic prestige, achieved without help from him, preys on his mind and stirs up a complex of wretched feelings in his unconscious—feelings of loneliness, anxiety, guilt, vague impulses of hostility towards someone or something (he can't say what), and fairly well-defined fears of being rejected—i.e., overlooked or forgotten as if he were nobody or didn't exist—by his own "flesh and blood," namely, his sons primarily.

Divorce Doesn't Revoke Memories

MOREOVER, in 30 years' marriage, a sense of identity with the partner is formed that, although it may not equate love, nevertheless cannot be dissolved by legal process. Thus it is likely that John is compulsively driven to put himself in your path at times since divorce, just for a sight of his old sparring partner, as a sort of relief from his recurrent feelings of unreality about his new conjugal setup.

So he crashes the boys' homes without preliminary, in a mood half wistful, half defiant—ready to be disagreeable to hide his embarrassment if his intrusion is challenged, I suppose. He isn't trying deliberately to embarrass you, although his new wife may have that aim; or may wish to push you aside to the fullest extent she can; and no doubt she sticks along wherever he goes, to keep a jealous eye on him.

How to act? What to do? With your sons grown and married, their homes are their castles nowadays; and if John butts in there causing you general discomfort when you are an invited guest, stand by with poise and let the others cope. His arrant selfishness is not your problem in those circumstances. And never, never let his ill-timed calls drive a wedge between you and the boys' families. Just pretend he doesn't exist and go as often as you are wanted and can manage. M. H.

B'nai B'rith to Build Home For Neurotic Children in Israel

A resolution to provide $100,000 for a home for neurotic children in Israel, was passed yesterday by the B'nai B'rith Women's Supreme Council, meeting for the third day of a four-day meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

The money, half of which has already been raised in advance gifts, will be used to build—on a cottage plan—a school and home to replace one bombed out during recent hostilities in Jerusalem. The home, to be built in Ein Kerem, a suburb of Jerusalem, is for children have have become neurotic as a result of war experiences in Europe.

Revival of Values

Rabbi Maurice Perkarsky, director of B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at the University of Chicago and national director of B'nai B'rith Hillel Training Institute, addressed the group, emphasizing the need for a revival of spiritual, moral and cultural values among adults, and the need to integrate them into the home so that children would be exposed to faith at home as well as through organized religious facilities.

Members of the State Department were speakers at two afternoon workshops. Harry W. Seamans, liaison officer of the State Department, Division of Human Rights, and John Maktos, legal adviser, discussed the U. N. Human Rights Declaration and Genocide Convention.

Miss Constance Roach, liaison officer of the State Department for UNESCO, emphasized the importance of establishing understanding between nations through educational mediums including exchange of students and the rebuilding of educational facilities in devastated areas.

Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, United States Treasurer, will be guest speaker at today's luncheon meeting at 1 p. m. in the East Room of the Mayflower. The luncheon, a salute to the 10th anniversary meeting of the Women's Supreme Council, is sponsored by the local B'nai B'rith Woman's Chapters.

Exciting 'Intruder' Is Making Rounds

By Richard L. Coe

"INTRUDER IN THE DUST" is a picture this and all other columns praised highly, but it got only an abbreviated booking at the Capitol and hasn't been seen since.

This week it's starting its tour of the neighborhoods, and I'll give you the theaters and dates in a moment.

The point, however, is that here is one of the better pictures Metro has turned out. It's got excitement and suspense and excellent acting. And Clarence Brown's direction on location in Oxford, Mississippi, is one of that veteran craftsman's finest achievements. But to exhibitors it's a problem, because it has no stars and because it happens to concern the relationship of whites and Negroes.

I say "happens" because William Faulkner was simply telling a good yarn in this story of a boy and an old lady and how they stuck to a queasy job to see justice done. Claude Jarman, jr., Elizabeth Patterson, David Brian and Juano Hernandez are the leading actors, and they're all fine.

So, if you're the sort who complains about our Hollywood pictures and wonders why we don't make better ones, go out of your way to see "Intruder in the Dust." Because if you don't, Hollywood's reply will be: "Yes, but when we do make a good, simple picture, it doesn't make money."

This one, I promise you, is worth making your sitter plans in advance for, and for giving that television set a rest.

Here's the schedule:

Tonight: at the Penn, Senator, MacArthur, Uptown, Atlas, Silver.

Wednesday night: at the Tivoli, Naylor, Senator, Circle, Calvert, Atlas, Silver and Flower.

Thursday: at the Naylor, Apex and Flower.

Friday: at the Apex.

Only future dates so far assured are: March 22, Sheridan; 23, Avalon; 25, 26, 27, Central; 29, Kennedy; April 4, Colony; April 6, York.

THE twenty-second one-act play finals the other night showed a good deal of careful work and only rarely did any in the four final companies betray nervousness over lines. . . . The problem of staging on the too-large stage of the too-large Roosevelt auditorium remained as ever with us, and all plays would have done better by employing less space. . . . The judges' winning choice, the Neighborhood Players in George Mosel's "Jinxed," seemed to meet the agreement of the audience and I, for one, was delighted with John K. Davidson's comic timing as the lazy hero, best work of the evening, for the Maud Howell Smith award winner, Anne Seigal, had performed in American University's "The Marriage Proposal," which was not in the finals. . . . The Foundry Players' "A Night at an Inn" boasted a good performance from James Elward and there was a good deal of logical movement. . . . The Montgomery Players' original, "Paragraph at Sam's," written and directed by Carl Eardley, was an original try, just not good enough. . . . The Alexandria Little Theater's "Knives from Syria" almost got second place.

VISITING this Capital is Dr. Hans Curjel, one of the directors of the Salzburg Festival. . . . Dr. Curjel has been in New York and will spend another month touring the country. . . . He'll find many of his onetime Festival visitors here and he'll be interested in the Sesqui music plans of Emerson Meyers. . . . You'll find Dr. Curjel at the Roger Smith.

INTERNATIONAL Theater Month isn't limited to Washington groups in this area . . . Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia at Fredericksburg last night opened a series of productions with its own group playing Ernst Toller's "No More Peace," revived last month by the Howard University players . . . This Friday and Saturday the group, under J. W. Warfield, will play Ibsen's "A Doll's House," and on the 21st the University Players will be down from Charlottesville to present Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" . . . Germany, Norway and England is nice going, Director Warfield.

OFFICIALS of the National Conference of Christians and Jews will see a special screening tonight of "Guilty of Treason," the film about the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, which is to follow "Cinderella" at Keith's.

PREVIEW tonight at the Playhouse of "The Third Man," the Joseph Cotten-Orson Welles-Graham Greene-Carol Reed adventure in Vienna . . . Last showing of "All the King's Men" goes on at 7, with showings of the new one at 8:45 and 10:40.

GLORIA SWANSON Statlering for a few days . . . Gloria, whose down-to-earth common sense and unfailing courtesy makes such a neat twist to her inevitable glamour, reports that "Sunset Boulecard" at last has a release date: August 15 . . . I can't wait to see Gloria's highly-touted return to the screen in the role of a silent star back on the movie stages . . . If that movie has half of the star's unique personality, it'll be an Oscar winner; she's the nicest person in the movie world.

ALEXANDRIA'S Little Theater last night presented Tennessee Williams' and Donald Windham's play, "You Touched Me!" which it will repeat tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Alexandria Recreation Center in Cameron st. . . . Charles Rogers of Maryland U. directed a cast that includes Murray Sheehan, one of the capital's most active resident players, Doris Buck, Bob Moore, Kitty Mifflin, Ray Hagerty, Dorothea Rose, and W. A. Nelson.

Kahn Displays His Artistry In Phillips Gallery Recital

Not three "B's" but three "Sch's" dominated last night's piano recital at the Phillips Gallery.

Beethoven was hardly more than a guest on a program of music by Schumann, Schubert, and Schoenberg. The pianist was Erich Itor Kahn, well known for his superb work as accompanist to some of our finest solo artists, and pianist of the Albeneri Trio.

In his solo role, Kahn displayed the same qualties that won him one of the Coolidge medals in recent seasons for excellence in chamber music. He plays music. If this statement seems redundant, it can be explained easily.

Many pianists today strive for effect in playing. Then try for speed, or power, or extremes in color, or phrasing that is hyperemotional.

Kahn played four works and delivered them with the manner and sound of a man who loves music whether he plays it for an audience or for his own enjoyment. This is, incidentally, the point of view from which every good musician plays, though every one hopes to play for a large audience.

Schumann's early Humoreske was followed by Beethoven's late Bagatelles. Before Schubert's posthumous A Major Sonata came Schoenberg's five pieces, Opus 23. Kahn was most successful in Schumann in the quieter, songful moments. In fiery passages, many notes did not sound. This did not mar the musicianly conception of the whole.

Beethoven's Bagatelles, of which there are 20, vary in intrinsic worth and interest. Kahn played six—any six give adequate representation to the entire group. His playing was more assured and showed a new fleetness and delicacy lacking in the Schumann.

Schoenberg's pieces have undeniable romantic flavor under their harmonic scheme. They are obviously the work of the author of Pierrot Lunaire. And they deserve more playing than they receive. Kahn gave them every nuance of meaning, making the unusual idiom clear and logical.

To turn from these to one of the most romantic pieces in piano literature, Schubert's A Major Sonta, was to move from decadent romanticism to the period when it was first flowering. The change was ably handled. Phrasing, pedaling, and the whole realization of Schubert's music was ideal.

Kensington Man Guilty of Assault

Jesse Ferguson, 29, of 15 Shaftsbury st., Kensington, Md., was sentenced to 18 months in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday for assault on a young woman Friday night.

The complainant, Miss Rose Mae Wood, testified Ferguson beat her with his fists for ten minutes after seizing her on the street near her home at 4912 Elm st., Bethesda.

2 Women Killed By Car on Leaving Funeral Home

Frederick, Md., March 13 (AP).—A woman and her daughter-in-law were struck and killed by an automobile here Sunday as they left a funeral home, where they paid respects to a dead friend.

Police said the automobile failed to stop after the accident.

The women were identified as Mrs. Mary Dutrow of Dundalk, Md., and Mrs. Caroline Dutrow, 51, the daughter-in-law, of Alliance, Ohio. Both were widows.

Jobs Open For Negroes, Official Says

The doors are not barred against Negroes seeking jobs, 900 District Negro in-school and out-of-school youths were told yesterday.

"Dream as you will, but base your planning on your ability," advised Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman, assistant to Oscar R. Ewing, head of the Federal Security Agency.

Mrs. Hedgeman delivered the keynote address at a day-long "career conference" sponsored by the Washington Urban League as part of its 18th annual Vocational Opportunity Campaign in the FSA auditorium.

"We are no longer a problem," Mrs. Hedgeman told her youthful listeners. "We are America's greatest asset—but we have to act like it. American democracy is no better than Negroes help America make it.

Yesterday's conference was held in cooperation with local public schools.

Panel discussions continued throughout the day. Among the subjects considered were "Job Opportunities in the Federal Government" and "Employment Opportunities for Youths in the District of Columbia."

State Board Sets April 12 Hearing In Dr. Sander Case

Concord, N. H., March 13 (U.P.).—Two groups that can decide the future of Dr. Hermann N. Sander's medical career took action today in the case of the acquitted mercy murder trial defendant.

The State Board of Registration in Medicine set April 12 for a hearing to determine whether to revoke the new Hampshire license of the 41-year-old physician who was freed Thursday in the death of his cancer-doomed patient.

The Hillsborough County Medical Society, to which Dr. Sander belongs, then announced at Manchester a special meeting will be called "within a week" to consider his case.

Ask Anne

Sure, and It's Nearly Time to Kiss The Blarney Stone; Anne Offers Party Tips for the Shamrock League

Good St. Patrick—who rid Ireland of all those pesky snakes—has been befriending the human race in a less direct way ever since.

Year after year, his birthday inspires gala parties that are as Irish as the shamrock and twice as entertaining. This year will be no exception, judging from letters reaching this column.

DEAR ANNE:

My daughter is planning to have a St. Patrick's Day party for seven of her girl friends, all around 9 years old. Can you tel me some new games they might play at the party? R. R. T.

Arlington.

Here are a few ideas:

1. Shamrock Hunt—Have cut-out shamrocks hidden about the room. Give prize to the one who finds the largest number.

2. Kissing the Blarney Stone Relay—Place a stone or something to represent a stone on the floor. Players line up for a relay in two or more equal groups. At the sound of the leader's whistle, the first one runs to the stone, gets down on his knees, kisses it, and runs back touching the person at the front of the line and taking his place at the back of the line. The group that finishes first wins.

3. Green Pig—Place a mirror in the bottom of a box and cover the sides of the box with green paper. Use a green light over the box and have in an otherwise darkened room. Let the players go to see it one at a time. When they look in the box, they will see their picture in green, the Green Pig.

4. The Many-Sided Pat—This one is a writing game, the young guests to jot down the most appropriate sort of "Pat" after each sentence.

1. A Pat that mends—(Patch); 2. A Pat that loves his country—(Patriot); 3. A Pat used by dressmakers—(Pattern); 4. A Pat that is good to eat—(Patty); 5. A Pat that the doctor welcomes—(Patient); 6. A Pat that acts fatherly—(Paternal); 7. A Pat that is part of a Spanish house—(Patio); 8. A Pat that does sentry duty—(Patrol); 9. A Pat that is old—(Patriarch); 10. A Pat that is a kind of quilt—(Patchwork).

5. Irish Songs and Jokes—Have some Irish songs—"Where the River Shannon Flows," "My Wild Irish Rose," etc.,—mimeographed and let the youngsters gather 'round to sing them. Another idea is to have each guest tell a Pat and Mike joke.

SURE, and it's a grand St. Patrick's party if your food and favors are in the Irish mood. To make these candy place-card shamrocks, use the following recipe:

CEREAL SHAMROCKS

¼ cup butter or margarine
½ pound marshmallows (about 2½ doz.)
½ teaspoon vanilla
5 cups popped rice cereal

Cook butter and marshmallows over hot water until thick and syrupy. Add vanilla and beat thoroughly. Put cereal in large greased bowl and pour on marshmallow mixture, stirring briskly. Press into greased shallow pan. Cut into shamrocks when cool. Set each candy shamrock into a green gum drop with a toothpick. Cut pipes of green paper and paint names on with white water colors. Stick pipes to shamrocks before they harden.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you tell me if there is a Red Cross Gray Lady organization in or near Bladensburg, Md.? I have practically all day to myself and would like to offer my services Mrs. E. E.

Bladensburg, Md.

The Prince Georges County Chapter of the Red Cross has no plans now for holding Gray Lady classes. There is little work of this kind done by the chapter and the people for it are already trained and at work.

However, the Prince Georges Red Cross has real need for volunteers in other jobs and would love to hear from you. They need staff assistants in the office at 4112 Hamilton st., Hyattsvile. Or you can serve in the motor corps or supply room, roll bandages or join a sewing group. Telephone Warfield 4400.

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit direct mail or telephone replies. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Woman Dismissed For Cussing Gets 2d NLRB Hearing

The case of a lady's right to cuss on the job was handed back yesterday for a new hearing.

The National Labor Relations Board set aside earlier findings on Mrs. Edna Ruggles, who was fired by the Indiannapolis Glove Co., Marion, Ind., last year for persistent swearing.

The AFL International Glove Workers Union appealed her case, and in September an NLRB trial examiner recommended she be rehired.

At that point, Mrs. Ruggles remarked: "I'm pretty damn tired of the whole thing." But today the board, by a 3-to-1 vote wiped out the examiner's report and ordered a rehearing or such other disposition of the case as the regional NLRB director finds advisable.

The company had appealed, charging tha trial examiner, Louis Plost, with "bias and prejudice." The board said it found no partialiyt but felt it best to do the job over "to avoid even the appearance of a partisan tribunal."

ARE YOU A SUBDIVIDER? If so, here is your chance to make a fortune and a name for yourself all in one transaction. Nearly a mile and a half of acreage fronting River and Bradley rds., overlooking Congressional Club. River rd., you know, is going to become Massachusetts ave. extended. We have here the most beautiful hills of Greater Washington's Capital City. I expended $1640 on each acre of these hills on landscaping and grading. As a suggestion: Build George Washington's Mt. Vernon home on the most beautiful hills you ever saw in your life right opposite the Congressional Club entrance. And another suggestion: Build a White House of the type President Truman lives in (except to reduce the size to meet the needs of your family) on the big adjoining hill. These two famous homes would be the sensation of Greater Washington's Capital City. You have a spring, a stream, and you can have your own swimming pool. You can have your own private bridle path as this is horse lovers' country. You can have your own private golf links right on your own property. There is a 5-acre lot right where all these important roads come together. You can have a Giant food store there to supply everything you need from the automobile to the table. Reach me at my home.

Lane May Veto Some of 114 Bills

Annapolis, Md., March 13 (AP).—Some of the 114 bills just passed by Maryland's General Assembly may be vetoed on grounds they were out of order at a short session, Governor Lane said today.

It depends considerably on the attitude of Attorney General Hall Hammond, the State's official lawyer.

Lane said he is awaiting Hammon's reaction to measures enacted by the legislature during Maryland's first 30-day session, which ended March 2.

Hammond is sifting them for legal defects. Those he finds valid will be passed on to the Governor for a policy decision of signature or veto.

About one-third of the bills passed were local in nature. They affected individual counties or municipalities.

The constitution limits 30-day session to state fiscal affairs, acute emergencies and matters of "general public welfare."

While waiting for Hammond's theories, Lane said he also has to consider whether debatable bills should be signed and left to the courts for a judicial test of their constitutionality.

The Governor signed six of the 114 acts before the legislature adjourned. Four put into immediate effect the income tax cuts he had sponsored. He also vetoed one. It would have established a State commission on alcoholism.

Color Video Scores With Sen. Johnson

Color Television, Inc., bedeviled by technical difficulties in two previous demonstrations in Washington, came through yesterday with a demonstration that impressed at least one observer.

He was Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which has legislative jurisdiction over the Federal Communications Commission, now considering various color television systems. Said Johnson: "No one can discount CTI after this demonstration."

Senator Johnson said, however, that although color television is "there," it is not yet perfected. He woud like to see the FCC adopt a "composite standard" for color, based on the best features of the systems now competing, which are Radio Corp. of America, Columbia Broadcasting System and Color Television, Inc.

He has faith in development of a single-tube color receiver to reduce the problem of getting a clear picture of CTI, to diminish the problem of size of set for RCA and to abolish the necessity for a color wheel on the CBS receiver.

RCA and CTI both have announced encouraging results in tests on such multicolor single tubes.

Arthur S. Matthews, CTI president, said his company would ask the FCC to take another look at its improved pictures, preferably in San Francisco, where the CTI laboratories are, since the necessity of "working out of a suitcase" in Washington had handicapped them in producing satisfactory results here.

CTI will give demonstrations again today and through the rest of the week at 11 a. m., over the facilities of WMAL-TV, for members of Congress and officials concerned.

The FCC resumes color TV hearings Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the Department of Commerce auditorium. The commission is attempting to set color TV standards to minimize confusion in a switch from black-and-white.

Louis Hayward Divorced

Hollywood, March 13 (U.P.).—Actor Louis Hayward left home on Columbus Day and hasn't come back, his wife charged today in getting a divorce. Mrs. Margaret Hayward, 38, was awarded "in excess of $1000 a month for three years" by a settlement. They were married May 29, 1946.

Navy Creates New Lab for Weapon Tests

Tests of new weapons developed by the Navy will be moved inside, in the immediate future, instead of extending to the Arctic, Tropics and deserts.

A new four-million-dollar laboratory for tests under all possible climatic and other conditions will be dedicated at 2 p. m., March 23, at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.

There, the new weapons, as they are developed, will be tried out until they break down, or are destroyed by use. When weaknesses or faults appear, the implements of war will be turned back for strengthening or redesign.

Facilities have been included to simulate any field or sea condition which might be met in use of the weapons. Thus, it will not be necessary to transport them, along with test experts, halfway around the world for tryouts.

Among the equipment in the new laboratory is a large deep-sea pressure tank, vibration room, and special chambers where temperatures and humidities can be created to simulate conditions in any part of the world. There are also air pressure chambers to create artificial altitudes from sea level to the stratosphere.

3 Radio Stations Fight Charges of News Distortion

Los Angeles, March 13 (U.P.).—The FCC today opened hearings into a renewal of license for three of America's most powerful radio stations, KMPC, Los Angeles, WJR, Detroit, and WGAR, Cleveland.

Charges before the Federal Communications Commission accuse owner G. A. Richards of ordering his employes to distort newscasts.

Richards' lawyer said the point at issue is whether a radio station can be operated "except in slavish dependency on the political party in power."

Richards seeks renewal of his licenses, and the right to transfer control of the three stations to a trusteeship.

Still In Love

There were so many wondrous things . . . We could have tried to do . . . And oh, there were such loving words . . . I might have said to you . . . But now the moons have vanished and . . . The years have passed away . . . And there are only memories . . . And dreams of yesterday . . . And now I know it is too late . . . To offer you my heart . . . And to exchange the promises . . . That we would never part . . . The dawn is dark and lonely and . . . The night is pale and sad . . . And nothing ever can replace . . . The joy we could have had . . . But whether you are quite content . . . Or you are feeling blue . . . I want your heart to know that I . . . Am still in love with you.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Is This What You'd Call A One-Track Mind?

He's a small time numbers writer, just barely able to make ends meet.

Sipping his afternoon coffee the other day, he was moaning about not being able to pay his income tax.

"I owe 'em $120," he mused "and I ain't got nickel number one. Wonder if the Government would like to bat it out in numbers play — about a quarter a day."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

At 1:30 this afternoon, Park Policeman No. 26 and a civilian worker came through this area and, without warning, maliciously cut down clotheslines which the householders had put up.

The lines had been fastened to trees on a barren and unused hill behind our apartment development, and were cut down because the trees are on Government property.

If cutting the lines wasn't bad enough, the heroes of "Operation Clothes Line" made matters worse by throwing the remnants into the mud, and flinging the pulleys into the woods.

Can the Park Police justify such tactics?

R. Rakowitz
4073 Minnesota ave. ne.

Dear Mr. Rakowitz:

Inspector Mark Raspberry, head of the Park Police, tells me he has investigated the incident and finds:

1. Householders were warned, orally, by a policeman who visited the neighborhood about a week ago. Inspector Raspberry concedes that "some people may not have gotten the warning, if they were not at home at the time." (The method of warning and the brief time interval allowed strike me as constituting a rather poor method of procedure.)

2. The lines are considered an unsightly encroachment on Government property, and will be ordered down, or forcibly removed if necessary, wherever encountered. (That seems fair enough.)

3. The Park Policeman did not touch the lines. He merely supervised the work of a civilian maintenance employe of the Park Service.

4. "Lines were cut only when necessary, according to my report," said the inspector. He had no comment on the charge that pulleys were thrown into the woods, other than; "When people ignore a warning and make it necessary for us to act, it's not unusual to find that we're charged with being discourteous."

Other householders who have been using Government trees will apparently save themselves similar unpleasantness by getting their lines down peedeeque.

Bill

COURT JESTER

At a recent dinner honoring Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, Mr. Justice Tom Clark refurbished an old story and got a good laugh with it.

It's the one about the temperance lecturer who trots out a jug of water and a jug of drinking whisky and drops a worm in each.

The worm in the water swims about happily, but the worm in the whisky shrivels up and dies. Triumphantly, the lecturer cries to his audience: "You saw the experiment with your own eyes; what does it prove?"

From the back of the hall comes the reply: "It proves that if you want to get rid of worms, drink whisky."

There's an equally humorous switch to the story, in which the lecturer asks his audience: "If you place a bucket of water and a bucket of gin before a hard-working mule, toiling out in the fields, which will he drink?"

In this version, the booming voice from the rear row calls out, "The water." And when the lecturer moves in for the kill with the dramatic question: "And why does he choose the water, my friend?" the voice from the rear replies:

"Because he's a jackass."

MISCELLANY

A few downtown businessmen are moaning that "there's no money around any more"—but I notice that their stores seem to be as full as ever . . . Joe Wershba, WTOP newsman, is currently sporting what he calls "a junior-size 10-gallon hat." He says he's working up to the real thing by easy stages, "so that I'll feel at home when I'm interviewing Western Congressmen" . . . I got a "red meter" parking ticket at 5:45 the other evening, and thereby learned for the first time that if the cop on the beat is industrious, the regulations are enforced right up to 6 o'clock . . . Hereafter when I break the law I'll try to make sure first that it's on a lazy policeman's beat. . . . A postal drama in three sentences: Mrs. S. L. Silverman of 4045 Ely pl. se. gave her husband a stack of letters to mail (requests for first-day covers, addressed to postmasters in various cities). But, husband-like, the old man forgot the letters on the bus and Mrs. Silverman was just about reconciled to the loss when the requested covers started to arrive. Some Good Samaritan had found the letters and dropped them in a mailbox. . . . Muses A. V. Monroe of 215 T st. nw.: "The forecaster said it was the cold wave's 'dying gasp.' If it was, he must have buried it alive." . . . Arnold J. Levine of 2803 Terrace rd. se. reports that he sent six shirts to the Pioneer Laundry with instructions to leave them unstarched—and believe it or not, that's the way they came back. The route man insists it's no miracle; "We always follow instructions." . . . Seems to me I've heard that one before, too.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

W. M. Devine muses that the reason most men talk in their sleep is that they spend their waking hours listening.

OUCH!

Katherine S. Miller of 1510 Webster st. nw. keeps tabs on the local news back in Holyoke, Mass., by reading that city's "Transcript-Telegram."

A recent news item there revealed that the superintendent of schools returned from an educators' convention with the report that the best joke at the session was:

"How do you get to Washington from here? Just go to Harvard and turn left."

Clare Barnes To Speak at Post Luncheon

Clare Barnes, jr., advertising art director turned satirist, will be one of the speakers at The Washington Post's Book and Author luncheon at 1 p. m. Friday, March 24 at the Statler Hotel.

Barnes

Barnes' two books are "White Collar Zoo," which deals with office "characters," and "Home Sweet Zoo," which carries the same technique into the home.

The three other speakers are:

Margaret Culkin Banning, whose latest novel, "Give Us Our Years," will be published by Harper & Brothers on March 29.

Navy Comdr. William J. Lederer, author of the humorous "All the Ship's At Sea," published recently by William Sloan Associates, Inc.

James Burnham, whose "The Coming Defeat of Communism" has been widely reviewed. It was published by John Day.

Barnes was art director for the advertising firm of Ted Bates & Co. when he got the idea for the first "Zoo" book. Barnes was handling a campaign which was to have been built around animal pictures.

With several hundred pictures around, Barnes' coworkers began comparing office types — in any office — with the animals. That was enough of a idea for Barnes.

Luncheon tickets, at $3 each, are available at Washington bookstores. This is the fifth season of The Washington Post's Book and Author series.

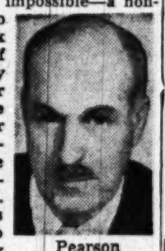
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

USSR And Back By Air Foreseen

By Drew Pearson

The Air Force is now designing a supersonic B-36 that will be able to accomplish what hitherto was considered the impossible—a non-stop flight to Russia, and back at the speed of sound. This may be one answer to the debate over the super airplane carrier, for the Navy has contended that U. S. bombers would fly so slowly that they could be knocked down by enemy fighter planes. Therefore the Navy urged a floating airplane base to approach the enemy.



Pearson

What this new bomber means, however, is that the Air Force will now be able to make hit-and-run attacks against Russia at tremendous speed from home bases in the United States.

The plan, still on the drawing boards, is to streamline the present B-36 by giving it swept-back wings and a turbo-prop engine. Most important of all, however, will be a supersonic propeller, already developed by Air Force technicians. Hitherto only jet planes have been able to fly faster than sound. But the new propeller will permit propeller-driven planes to fly at that speed also.

McCarthy's Witch

Last year, likable young Senator Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin asked some friends for advice on what he could do to insure his re-election in 1953.

One friend urged that he push the St. Lawrence Seaway which would benefit the Great Lakes and bring new business to Wisconsin. It was also urged that he work for closer industrial cooperation between neighboring Canada and the Great Lakes States. Finally it was suggested that any Senator who consistently attacked communism would have a great appeal for the voters.

Today the man who urged this latter advice, Father Edmund A. Walsh of Georgetown University, is not happy at the outcome; while Republican leaders are getting unhappier by the minute at the antics of the junior Senator from Wisconsin.

In the first place, McCarthy's witch hunt for Communists inside the State Department has disrupted our entire foreign service at a time when our foreign relations are more delicately balanced than ever.

Second, politically-minded Republicans hitherto could make broad charges about Communists in the State Department and get away with it. But now the harem-scarem Senator from Wisconsin has reduced it all to cold figures. He started by claiming there were 207 Communists or pro-Communists in the State Department, then reduced it to 57. But so far, any of the real pro-Communists he's mentioned had already been kicked out.

Finally some of the Republican Senators who really know the gentleman from Wisconsin and the situation in his State are afraid the Democrats will raise the cry of: "Look who's talking!"

For Joe McCarthy had some troubles back home which don't bear too much inspection including an income tax argument and a move for his disbarment.

Tax Troubles

His tax troubles occurred in 1943, when the State of Wisconsin claimed he failed to disclose an income of $42,000. Joe explained that he had made some money speculating in stocks while he was out of the United States and not a citizen of Wisconsin; therefore, he didn't have to pay a State income tax. However, McCarthy still held office as a State judge at the same time he claimed he was not a citizen of Wisconsin, and in the end, tax authorities accepted a compromise payment.

One year later, 1944, Joe ran against GOP Senator Alex Wiley in the primaries and received a total contribution of $18,000 from his father, his brother and his brother-in-law. Wiley defeated him. But when the campaign smoke was over, it was discovered that McCarthy's father didn't have enough income to file a tax return himself, while neither the brother or brother-in-law filed an income of more than $2,000.

Where they got the $18,000 nobody yet knows.

Quickie Divorces

In Wisconsin, divorces are not supposed to be filed in two separate jurisdictions. But when McCarthy was a judge in Appleton, Wis., his political friends, Congressman Kersten and Arlo McKinnon, suddenly brought the divorce case of Kordas vs. Kordas before him, even though it was already filed in Milwaukee. They got almost immediate action. The complaint was filed on September 3, 1946 and the divorce was granted September 5.

The two attorneys, Kersten and McKinnon both contributed to McCarthy's political campaign.

McCarthy also granted divorces at about that time to two other Milwaukee residents, Chester J. Roberts and Eileen Roberts, who were represented by Max Litow, a prominent Republican who also contributed to McCarthy's campaign. The divorce was granted in about two days.

During his 1946 campaign against Senator Bob La Follette, McCarthy not only failed to resign from the bench, but swapped circuits with other judges so as to campaign in various parts of the State, with the result that the Board of Bar Commissioners recommended to the Wisconsin Supreme Court that he be disbarred. The Supreme Court stated that the Senator had violated the State constitution and the code of ethics of the American Bar Association, but failed to disbar him.

That's the record of the man who now so vigorously challenges the records of State Department employees.
